This is to certify that the card published in the New York Herald of this day (Friday, 23d inst.) is not true. De Grath sold out all his right, title and interest in and to the article known as "Olio Electrico," "Rei da dor" or "Electric Oil" in 1872 and has never since that time owned the same, as various contracts and affidavits made and signed by him will abundantly prove; and legal proceedings are now being taken to restrain said De Grath and his agents from interfering in any manner with the business of making or selling said medicine; and the public are cautioned against purchasing from De Grath or his agents, as our legal rights to said medicine will be strictly enforced.

PLYMOUTH PRAYER MEETING.

BEECHER PAYS A GLOWING TRIBUTE TO THE CHARACTER OF DR. BACON.

Warm weather has not the slightest effect on the attendance at Plymouth prayer meetings. Last night the lecture room was filled to overflowing. After the regular exercises Mr. Beecher said:—

BEECHER'S TALK.

"There is a vast diversity of fact in regard to the primitive experience of Christian life. I suppose men educated aright would never know the time when they entered the kingdom of God, for Christianity has the principles of hereditary transmission. The parents of religious children are themselves the children of religious parents. We recognize in Scripture that the seed of the blessed is most likely to be blessed. But for the larger part people become Christians after they become adults, and every person converted in after life has a personal experience dependent entirely upon their education and habits. It is a mistake to suppose that conversion is like a clock that goes round and round till the hour strikes, then everything changes, the bell has rung. Some complain that they have not the same feelings that they had when first converted, that they have gone back. The first emotion of love is not the strongest, it develops itself in every direction. I am sorry for any Christian whose first experience is his best.

After Mr. Beecher had finished his talk he gave an opportunity for any who chose to speak, and Dr. Edward Beecher rose and said:—I think the brothers and sisters will be glad to hear what we did at the council of the Orange Valley church. It was believed that a communication would be made explaining the reason why some of the brethren invited would not be present, but when the inquiry was made for any communication addressed to the council nothing of the kind appeared, and he could not see that the absence of the two brethren who declined affected the movements of the universe at all. The business went forward without them. As to the young minister I would say that the impression with regard to him was very favorable indeed, and we ordained him without any hesitation. Mr. Beecher then said:—"I defend the liberty of the individual Church; I defend the right of any church to say they won't go to a council. I defend the right of the Church of the Pilgrims to say they won't attend a Council because Plymouth church is to be represented, for this church intends to be represented at nearly all the councils around here. Above all, I defend the right of Plymouth church to refuse to attend councils. I defend the right of all churches to refuse to attend all councils. I believe in the independence of a church; but my church don't, and they are too many for me—they overrule me. For myself, I cannot say I feel bad to see some independent churches springing up out of our midst, instead of the old fashioned Puritanical ones.

Brother Raymond here rose and impressed upon the congregation that all the Congregational churches of Brooklyn had been invited to attend this Council, and that all had accepted, with the exception of Drs. Budington and Storrs. He then went on to say:—No one knows what this church owes to Dr. Bacon. It was his devotion to the preparation of the Council, in which we were so signally successful, that he lost his health and is now obliged to retire from the pulpit.

Mr. Beecher's face flushed at the recollection thus brought up, and he said, in a voice trembling with emotion. "I want to confirm, and, if possible, add to this testimony. I have been reticent on this subject for two reasons—the first, because of delicacy, and second, on account of prudence. A very great number of brethren in the Christian ministry have felt it needful to look well to their steps, and it would be wrong for me to say that during the trouble it has pleased God to bring on us we have been abandoned by our Christian friends, because I think the great majority have been before God daily in our behalf, but a declaration of that, in any form that should be made public, for reasons of prudence, and for a fear of being obtrusive, has withheld very many of these testimonials. It was so with our brother Bacon, although he wrote to me once and continued to write when he saw the necessity; yet he was very delicate in anything like pressing himself upon me. Yet I needed him and called upon him, and although he was then trembling on the verge, he never spared himself, and he said two or three times, "If I could only live to be present at the Council I would be willing to lie down and die. "I think he is one of the sweetest-minded, most delicate and honorable of the young ministers I have met; a man to be loved by those to whom the word "love" is as sacred as the heart of Christ. So I love him. Full of sensibility, if I had done wrong, and he thought it, he would have come to me and said it; but to backbite, to whisper, is impossible to him, and it was that declaration of love for me that led the ministers to put the on him. Let them do what they will to me, I am an old soldier and can stand it, but to see young men that are rising smitten in the face for fidelity hurts me. But I think he will not mind it long. Brethren, there are sadder things than to die. I suppose no man ever carried the heart of Christ in this life, who has not known a thousand times when he could say, "To die with Him would be better than to live."

The Examining Committee met after prayer meeting to converse with any who desired to join the church on the next Sabbath.

THE CASE OF MOULTON VS. BEECHER.

POUGHKEEPSIE, June 23, 1876.

The Supreme Court to-day, in reversing Judge Dyckman's decision in the case of Moulton vs. Beecher, held that an order directing a nolle prosequi is a sufficient termination of the prosecution of an indictment to permit an action for false imprisonment to be brought thereon.

PLUMB VS. M'GUIRE.

Mr. Andrew Jackson Plumb, formerly a liberal republican, entered the Custom House yesterday to go to his office, in the Ninth division, in a very excited condition; or not to put too fine a point upon it, he was, it is said, under the influence of liquor. Mr. McMichael, chief of the bond room, where Plumbs desk is situated, relieved him by transferring another bond clerk to his place. Plumb resented this, called the other clerk an "Irish Roman Catholic——" and wanted to know what he was doing at his desk. McGuire, the insulted scrivener, did not strike him, but to show his disgust at Plumb's conduct spat in his face. Deputy Collector Phelps reported the affair to Collector Arthur, with the suggestion that A. J. Plumb should be "reduced." Mr. Plumb is a prominent politician of the Nineteenth Assembly district.

DEATH FROM OPIUM.

Coroner Ellinger held an inquest yesterday in the case of Mrs. Eliza Crayton, who died at the house of her daughter, Mrs. Ruck, No. 276 West Tenth street, a few days since. It was alleged that deceased had taken a dose of opium, from the effects of which she died. It was stated at the inquest that the deceased had been in the habit of taking opium in large quantities daily and sometimes hourly, and that the dose was usually from fifteen to twenty grains. This excessive use of the drug, it was alleged, undermined her health, and her sudden death was the result.

The jury rendered a verdict of death from poison.

Mr. Peter Ruck, Jr., said to a HERALD reporter that the death of Mrs. Eliza Crayton was not sudden, as reported to the Coroner. The deceased lady at the time of her demise was seventy years and four months old, and she was in the full possession of her faculties and aware of her approaching end. She had been ill for three months previous and bedridden through lameness. For some time prior to her death she had not taken any opium at all. It is true, however, that she had been compelled during the past thirty years to take opium almost daily, but not in large doses, as stated. She never suffered apparent evil consequences from the drug, and did not die while under its influence. The reason that the Coroner came in was because the family physician's certificate of death mentioned as among the complications of deceased's disorders "paralysis of the stomach, consequent on the constant use of opium." It was satisfactorily explained to the official, however, that opium poisoning did not kill Mrs. Crayton, who was buried on Thursday. An annuity of $8,000, which she had enjoyed through life, ceased at her death, and did not revert to the family.

PROSPECTS OF THE SEASON.

There is no doubt now but what the season will be a success. The private boarding houses have commenced to fill up, and the Ocean House, which opens on Monday, expects to be full a portion of the season. It can accommodate about five hundred guests. The proprietors have engaged Professor Lander's orchestra of New York. The little Aquidneck House, near Touro Park, as its expenses, compared to the Ocean House, are not very heavy, always does a good business, and is a popular resort for those who desire a quiet, comfortable home. Hartmann's Maison Meublée so far this season has had a very good run of trade, and it will be extensively patronized a few weeks later by the members of the Narragansett Gun Club, Polo Club, &c. The Kay Street House is open, but as yet but few of its rooms have been rented. The hotel keepers anticipate a good season, and say that the indications are better than they were last year. They claim that the transient travel will make business very lively, in view of the attraction at Philadelphia, and for this reason they have made arrangements accordingly. It is reported that they had much rather have transient than permanent guests—the former, we presume, being more profitable. This may account for the fact that no more rooms are engaged at the hotels. Many of the private boarding house keepers have materially reduced the price of board, but this has been brought about simply by the competition in business and the fact that the season of 1876 has already opened. They have wisely come to the conclusion that it is better to engage a family early in the season than to wait several weeks later and then be obliged to take them at the same price. They justly claim that provisions are as high as they were last season, and for this reason alone they should not be obliged to reduce the price of board; but economy is the watchword, and the visitors are determined to go the rounds before deciding where they will locate for the summer.

THE WESTCHESTER POLO CLUB

will transfer their game from Jerome Park, New York, to this city about the middle of July, and the manner born rejoice that the members of the club have selected Newport as their summer resort. The location of the grounds—the extreme southern end of Thames street—is all that could be desired, and it is doubtful if a more eligible site could have been selected anywhere else in the city. It contains about ten acres, and a huge steam roller is now engaged in levelling it down. It will take about three weeks to get it in order. It is being enclosed with a fence some nine feet high, in order to have it as exclusive as possible. It is proposed to play three practice games per week, and two or three prize games every month. Near by suitable stables have been engaged, and without doubt everything will be in readiness for the famous game by the 15th of July. Before that time it will be necessary to have it mowed three or four times, and lawn mowers for the greater part of the season will have to be constantly employed. The good people who live here all the year round are anxiously inquiring whether they will have an opportunity to witness the sport. They say they will pay almost any price in order to witness the fun. There is no doubt that the club will admit all who are worthy to be admitted and who are willing to obey their rules and regulations.

THE NARRAGANSETT GUN CLUB,

whose membership is composed almost wholly of the summer residents, are looking forward to an interesting season's sport at their grounds in Middletown, about two miles from Newport. The members of the club need have no fear of being molested by an officer belonging to a society with a long name. Said society is a weak institution here, and as the Legislature recently refused to take any notice of several petitions against pigeon shooting, it is safe to predict that the sport will go on as usual. To the credit of the residents of this city the petitions did not originate here; neither did they receive any signers here. Newport begins to see that it is for her interest to cater to her summer guests. The gun club is a credit to the place, and whenever a match is in progress the utmost order prevails, and the spectators are composed of some of the first families, who spend their summer here. The opposition to pigeon shooting had its origin in Providence, probably originating out of envy to her sister capital in being favored with this and other attractions. It is thought that the polo games will interfere somewhat with the gun club arrangements, but this, no doubt, will be mutually arranged at the proper time.

A RIFLE RANGE

has been constructed near the grounds of the Narragansett Gun Club, and it is proposed to arrange another one in Portsmouth. The latter is too far in the country to be a success, and the former will not be liable to be extensively patronized by the summer residents, owing to the other attractions of the season. Both will have 1,000 yard ranges, and they will look principally to Newport's guests for support.

THE COACHING CLUB

will be well represented, and Mr. DeLancey Kane, whose mother has rented a villa on Bellevue avenue, is expected here with his coach next month. Mr. Augustus Whiting's new coach is daily attracting attention, and he always has it full of guests when out on the avenue for the afternoon drive. It was built by Hooper & Co., of London, and is complete in all its arrangements. The President of the club, and the Vice President, Mr. William P. Douglass, and several of the Governing and Executive Committee, will spend the summer here. Mr. Douglass has rented the little Deacon cottage, better known as the Parker estate, on Bellevue avenue.

YACHTING.

The Newport Yacht Club has organized by the election of the following officers:—Commodore, J. Smith Homans, of New York; Vice Commodore, Louis L. Larillard, of New York; Treasurer, Samuel F. Pratt, of Boston; Secretary, E. W. Brewerton, of Newport; Measurer, Richard Yeomans, of Newport. The club have engaged a suitable building on Long Island and are looking forward to a very interesting season's sport. Quite a large number of the summer residents are interested in the new club.

PERSONAL GOSSIP.

Admiral Hoff, U. S. N., and family have taken rooms at a private house, as has also his son, Lieutenant Commander W. B. Hoff, U. S. N., in command of the United States torpedo boat Alarm, now at Philadelphia.

Miss Porter, daughter of Admiral Porter, has also taken apartments at a private house.

Admiral Alden, U. S. N., will spend a few weeks with C. N. Beach, of Hartford, at the latter's villa on Kay street.

A son of Mr. George Bancroft, ex-Minister to Germany, has rented an unpretentious cottage on Paradise road, near the famous Hanging Rocks, where His Excellency Dom Pedro made a flying visit last Sunday.

Mr. Theodore F. Havemeyer, the Austrian Consul at New York, has arrived at the villa of Mrs. Loring Andrews, on Bellevue avenue. Mr. Hugo O. Fritsch will spend the summer with him. Mr. Havemeyer has some of the finest turnouts in the place, which will attract considerable notice during the season.

His Honor Mayor Bedlow, Mr. George R. Fearing, Mr. Augustus Whiting, Mr. Fairman Rogers, Mr. Havemeyer and Mr. Fritsch will drive four-in-hands.

The Countess Banuelos and her daughters have arrived from Madrid and have taken rooms in Catharine street. It is rumored that the Belgian Minister, Maurice del Fosse, will spend the summer here, as usual. C. D'Bilot, of the Swedish Legation, is at the Aquidneck House.

The flag on the Newport Club House is at half-mast, the occasion being the death a few weeks ago, as announced in the HERALD, of its president, Philip A. Stockton.

COLONEL FOWLER A FUGITIVE.

A FORMER INTIMATE OF BOSS TWEED FLEES TO ESCAPE PUNISHMENT FOR EMBEZZLEMENT.

Colonel John Fowler, Jr., ex-Judge Advocate of First Division, National Guard of the State of New York, ex-lawyer of ex-Boss W. M. Tweed, and bosom friend of General Tweed, son of the ex-Boss, has left his palatial residence at New Rochelle, Westchester county, for parts unknown, leaving liabilities estimated at $200,000. He is believed by most of those interested in him to be now in Europe, but there are some who think he is hiding in Chicago. Among his victims is a Long Island farmer, named Carmen, who gave him $10,000 for investment, which sum Fowler, although he paid interest on it, embezzled. Fowler was counsel for a number of estates which are believed to have been plundered. Fowler once had offices at the corner of Fulton and Nassau streets. Thence he removed to Broadway, into the Park Bank Building, where he neglected to pay his rent and likewise victimized the janitor by borrowing money. After he took to flight his safe was forced open and found to contain nothing. It may be remembered that Fowler figured in the Tammany exposures as one of the men who received one of Davidson's sales without paying for it. When Tweed was in power Fowler did a large real estate business, but of late his business had dwindled to almost nothing at all.

Fowler is a son of Judge Fowler, of Pennsylvania, and was married to the widow of the well known Royal Livingstone. By her he had a son, now twenty-two years of age, who is a clerk in the Corporation Counsel's office. His wife, when he married her, was estimated to be worth $200,000; now she is reputed to be worth $2,000. On one occasion, it is alleged, he forced himself into her sick room and said if she would not advance him $4,000

HE WOULD COMMIT SUICIDE.

The fugitive is alleged to have spent a fortune upon a dissolute woman. About eighteen months ago Fowler was arrested "quietly" three times for refusing to pay over money he had received from the State to authorized claimants; but the matters were settled and not made public. The arrests were made by officers from the Marshal's Bureau, in Nassau street.

Mr. M. R. Clark, attorney for Sabin & Co., the mortgagees of Fowler's library, on which they had advanced $3,500, has seized the books, &c., and they are to be sold on the 26th inst.

The fugitive was a member of the Americus and several Fifth avenue clubs. General Shaler is credited with having caused his resignation from the National Guard "for cause." Fowler was of necessity a leading light of Tammany Hall.

Great sympathy is expressed at New Rochelle for Mrs. Fowler, who was a leader of fashion there and generally beloved. The deed boxes of the estates in the hands of Fowler have been removed to his late residence at New Rochelle. That residence, the furniture and silver plate, &c., are mortgaged to their utmost value.

FALL FROM AN HOSPITAL WINDOW.

Shortly before three o'clock yesterday morning Mary Gerry, a patient in the Chambers Street Hospital, was found lying on the sidewalk in front of the building dying from injuries she had received by falling. She was taken inside, and being asked how she came there stated that she had unpleasant dreams, and not being able to sleep attempted to get out. It appeared on investigation that while delirious she took advantage of the temporary absence of her attendant, and, getting out of bed, tied the blankets together. She then lowered herself from the fourth story window, but as the rope did not reach to the ground by fifty feet she released her hold and fell. Death ensued within a few hours, she having received fatal internal injuries, besides fractures of the arm and leg.

The deceased was fifty-two years of age, a native of Ireland and lived in Vandewater street. She entered the hospital on Wednesday last, to be treated for a broken arm received by falling down stairs.

A HOAX.

In consequence of an advertisement in one of the morning papers, calling for 3,000 men to go to the Black Hills, there assembled yesterday on the corner of Greene and Fourth streets (the place designated in the advertisement), about 500 men and boys. At nine o'clock the crowd had taken possession of a lagerbeer saloon on the southwest corner of the intersection of the streets named, and as they heard nothing in reference to the proposition advertised a row seemed imminent. Nothing more convenient at hand, the enraged men singled out the proprietor of the saloon as the object of their vengeance. The timely arrival of the police prevented a disturbance and dispersed the crowd.

THE EXHIBITION.

A FRONT ELEVATION OF A DWELLING HOUSE OF THE HARDEE INDIANS ON VIEW—MODEL OF THE HELL GATE EXCAVATIONS—A DECIDED INCREASE IN THE NUMBER OF VISITORS.

PHILADELPHIA, June 23, 1876.

There was to-day erected on the east side of the government building a front elevation of one of the peculiar dwellings used by the Hardee Indians of the northwest coast of the American Continent.

A large and most valuable collection of models of these structures has for several weeks been exhibited in the building, but the façade now in position on the outside was taken bodily from a Hardee house and sent to the Exposition by Dr. J. W. Swan, a well known collector of Indian curiosities in Alaska and British Columbia. The façade is of cedar, 18 feet high by 40 feet in width, the distance from the base to the eaves being about 14 feet. Its peculiar interest arises from the fact that it is completely covered with grotesque paintings, representing the mythological characters of Indian religion. The tribes inhabiting the islands of the North Pacific coast have an endless number of traditions or superstitions, which are invariably symbolized by paintings or carvings on everything they make, whether it be a house or a button. The figures are sometimes very faithfully drawn, but usually they are conventional representations of some strange idea. On each side of the door are two rudely painted whales, but these are made up of at least a dozen other animals. The body of the one on the right is filled with pictures of salmon heads, eels, human faces with glaring eyeballs; hideous figures, which may be either human or mythological. The blow-hole contains the distorted figure of a man, and on the back is a large salmon. The other whale much resembles this, except the human faces are even more hideous. Partly above and partly on each side of the door is painted a grotesque picture somewhat resembling the human form, but the feet are represented as claws and the hands have each a large eye in the palm. Whenever the natives paint or carve a hand this eye always appears in the same spot and with the same number of lines, though the significance of the combination still remains a mystery. The elevation is bordered with green, dumpy pictures, supposed to be intended for human heads and bodies, with fearfully distorted limbs. The most curious part of this exhibit is the totem-post standing directly in front of the door. It is about twenty-two feet in height, with a large hole in the base, which serves as a vestibule to the door, and the post is carved from top to bottom with the most tedious forms imaginable. The first represents a monster bear; above this is a grotesque carving of Itl-tads-dale, the mother of the Haidalis, and on top of this are two separated dumpy reliefs, supposed to be imitations of the faces and forms on the border. To every house erected by the Haidali, or Sitkatrites, the "totem" posts are regarded as indispensable, and it is believed that every ornament and every line had at one time a significance, which may, however, have been lost in the lapse of time or only vaguely understood.

THE EXCAVATIONS AT HELL GATE.

The southeastern corner of the government building contains a model of the excavations now being made in the roof at Hallett's Point, Hell Gate. The model represents a portion of Long Island at that place, with houses, trees, &c., and near the Point are the machine shops, engines and engine houses erected for the purpose of keeping tools in repair and compressing air and the motor of the drilling machines.

CENTENNIAL NOTES.

A dinner was given this evening to the British judges by the Canadian Commissioners at the Lafayette Restaurant.

On Monday evening a reception will be given to the foreign Commissioners and judges by the Academy of Fine Arts. The preparations are upon a liberal scale.

The total admissions for Thursday were 51,799, of which 39,394 were paying and 12,405 non-paying. Receipts, $19,697.

A specimen raft of the kind used by the United States government at the life saving stations was yesterday placed upon the large lake. A public test of its life saving capacity will soon be made.

To-morrow at four o'clock the Arion Society of Germantown, whose services have been kindly volunteered for the occasion, will give a concert in the Music Pavilion in Lansdowne Valley. The grounds will be kept open till nine o'clock P. M., but admissions at the gates will not be permitted after seven o'clock.

Turkey's display in the main building was formally opened to-day.

UP IN A BALLOON.

THREE ASCENTS YESTERDAY OUTSIDE THE EXHIBITION GROUNDS BY MR. LEO SCHEPP—WHAT A HERALD CORRESPONDENT SAW—A TRIP FROM PHILADELPHIA TO NEW YORK ON TUESDAY.

PHILADELPHIA, June 23, 1876.

The sensation of the day at the Exhibition grounds was the successful trial ascension of a new mammoth balloon, under the auspices of Mr. Leo Schepp, a wealthy New York public spirited business man, who had the air ship built at his own expense, not for the purpose of money-making, the ascension being free to the public, but from a desire to contribute to the general amusement and to aid in contributing to aeronautic science by a series of experiments in navigating the air, with a view of testing the practicability of trips between Philadelphia and New York by balloon. The air ship was built in Philadelphia by Professor John Wise, and has been completed in the short space of three weeks. It is made of the best drilling, extra strong cords, and has had two vats of oil. The capacity of the balloon is about 42,000 cubic feet of gas, it being about eighty feet high when fully inflated and twenty-six feet in diameter. An open space of ground directly opposite the principal entrance to the Exhibition grounds was secured immediately adjoining the Globe Hotel, and at noon an inflation was begun by means of a connection with the city gas mains. Owing to the large size of the balloon it was nearly six o'clock before the bag was filled, by which time thousands of people had gathered about, blocking up the streets and requiring the aid of the police to keep room for the aeronauts and attendants to perfect the arrangements for an ascension. Shortly after six all was announced to be in readiness. Mr. Charles Wise a son of the Professor, a HERALD correspondent and another gentleman stepped into the car, and the word "Let go" was given. A stout line attached to the concentrating ring was secured to a windlass, Professor Wise not thinking it expedient to make a free ascension until the new balloon had been tested.

This first ascension was not altogether a success, nor was the second, owing to some mismanagement, and the baloon was hauled in before a very great height was reached. The third ascension was a complete success. Upon this ascension John Wise, the younger, a lad of fifteen, grandson of the professor, was in charge, and he unmistakably showed himself to be the aeronaut of the family. The four passengers were young Wise, ex-Confederate General Cook, one of the survivors of the Virginius massacre; the representative of an Albany paper and the HERALD correspondent. All the rope was let out, the balloon reaching a height of 600 feet, and so indescribably enchanting was the panoramic spread around and below us that we all regretted the impossibility of going still higher. The tens of thousands of enthusiastic spectators in the streets and in the Exhibition grounds, on the tops of the houses and hotels, were apparently so many specks.

On one side the Centennial grounds and buildings made a beautiful picture almost at our feet, while beyond was the Schuylkill, like a silver thread, winding in graceful curves between green hills; beyond were the valleys and hills stretching miles away up toward the interior of the State; on the other side was the Delaware, beyond the hills of New Jersey, and the Delaware Bay; a white haze on the horizon showed where the ocean lay. The whole picture was one of surpassing beauty and impossible to describe within the short limits of a telegraphic despatch.

The balloon, having been satisfactorily tested, was lowered, swaying and chafing, as though impatient to be free.

If the weather is fair Mr. Wise will start for New York in the air ship on Tuesday next. John Wise, the younger, the youthful aeronaut, who has made six or more ascensions alone, deserves the highest praise for his coolness, steadiness of nerve and ability.

THE REAL SECEDERS.

NEW YORK, June 22, 1876.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD:—

In to-day's issue of your great paper is an article headed "The French Workingmen," in which it is said that the Communists separated from the Workingmen's Committee to receive the French Workingmen's Delegation. The fact in this case is that the workingmen of this city have separated from a committee composed chiefly of persons engaged in speculative businesses of some kind or other, or in none at all. Among them is only one workingman. Whereas in the committee which meets every night at No. 102 Prince street, the contrary is the case, all being working people of different origins, such as Russians, Germans, Swiss, Italians, Belgians, French, Irish, &c., long residents, for the most part, and citizens of this country. By inserting the above in to-morrow's issue of your paper you will correct an erroneous statement, and oblige yours respectfully, THE COMMITTEE, 102 Prince street.

DRY DOCK SAVINGS BANK.

The run on the Dry Dock Savings Bank is at an end. Yesterday there were only a few dozen persons who appeared to withdraw their money, and some of those who had drawn it during the week returned to deposit it again. In consequence of the withdrawal of deposits during the run the bank has saved in interest about $2,000.

HARD MONEY IN ESTEEM

Views and Preferences of Delegates to St. Louis.

DAVIS AS A SECOND CHOICE.

WISCONSIN.

THE DELEGATION ALMOST UNANIMOUS FOR TILDEN—HARD MONEY IN THE WEST.

MILWAUKEE, June 16, 1876.

I have gathered the sentiments of the Wisconsin delegation to St. Louis, and it will be found that Tilden is the favorite with the democrats of this State.

DELEGATES AT LARGE.

J. R. DOOLITTLE, residence Racine, lawyer Chicago, ex-State Senator—I go to St. Louis to consult with the other delegates without instructions from the people of the State of Wisconsin. My intention is to vote for the best man. Who that may be I cannot say at present. I positively have no personal leanings or preferences. If I felt perfectly sure Tilden could carry the State of New York he would very likely be my choice. With Hendricks, we think, we can carry Indiana. Davis is considered by many likely to carry Illinois, Indiana and possibly Wisconsin. There are objections to the nomination of Davis, because there was a disappointment with regard to the campaign of 1872. While all three are personally good men, matters may yet transpire rendering it undesirable to nominate either. For instance, an article in to-day's Chicago Times (19th) makes a statement of rather a serious character against Tilden which, if true, would greatly weaken his chances. We must have a strong candidate if we hope for success, and I do not see my way clearly yet, and shall not be able to make up my mind definitely until I have consulted with the remainder of the delegation. It looks now as though a majority of the delegation are in favor of Tilden.

ALEXANDER MITCHELL, banker, President of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railroad, the Crœsus of the Northwest and undoubted leader of the democratic party of Wisconsin, says—Judging by the expressions of people all over the State, and the general sentiment of the party, I should say things now look as though Tilden was the unanimous choice of the party in Wisconsin. I do not know what may occur between this and the time of the Convention to alter this state of affairs. My present impression is that if everything continues as at present Tilden may be my own choice. It is impossible to speak definitely, however. Much depends on the effects of the Cincinnati Convention. About second choice I do not know. Things have not shaped themselves so I can decide. I regard David Davis as a good man, a very good man, but can't say yet that he would be my second choice. Hendricks also is spoken of favorably. Tilden is a reformer, a genuine reformer, and he has other qualities that would make him a very strong candidate. He is a man who, if elected President, would, from past experience in somewhat similar matters, know how to punish rogues wherever found, whether in republican or democratic ranks. I cannot say more at present.

THEODORE RUDOLPH, La Crosse, real estate agent—My first choice will be Tilden. It is that of the majority of the party, and I see no reason why it should not be considered the strongest that can be made. I am not able to speak definitely as to my second choice, but so far as I can tell at present it may be Hendricks. Still, many things may happen to change this. A great deal depends upon what grows out of the Cincinnati Convention. There is also the question of locality. The best man will, of course, have my support. David Davis might, under certain circumstances, be my second choice.

GEORGE B. SMITH, delegate at large, Madison, lawyer—My choice for President is Samuel J. Tilden. If the nomination of Tilden proves impossible after consultation with the remainder of the delegation, and looking the field thoroughly over, I shall decide on the next best man. Mr. Smith is what is called a Tilden man first, last and all the time.

DISTRICT DELEGATES.

FIRST DISTRICT.

M. D. PRATT, Kenosha, farmer and banker—I have not thought particularly about any one for first choice except Tilden. I believe he will prove acceptable to the majority of the party in this State, and as at present advised, I know of no one else that I shall support. There are several men, any one of whom I should like to see nominated, but unless something important occurs to change my views Tilden is my first and only choice. I am a hard money man, and Tilden is the choice of the hard money men. I would not like to see a soft money man nominated, unless there were other reasons to make it a strong nomination. I think well of Davis personally, but he has not been talked about much lately, and I do not know that he has any chance. I have no doubt in my own mind that Tilden will be our man, and under these circumstances shall not for the present think of a second choice.

F. W. LYMAN, Kenosha, boot and shoe dealer—My choice first, last and all the time is Tilden. I think he is a thoroughly good man, and have no doubt he will get the nomination. I am not sure that I shall go to St. Louis, or who will go in my place if I do not, as engagements at home seem likely to prevent me. I hope the good sense of the Convention will result in the nomination of Tilden. I think well of both Davis and Hendricks, but of the latter I must say is too much of a soft money man to have my support. I have been a republican, but left the party because of dissatisfaction with their treatment of the subject of finance or free trade.

SECOND DISTRICT.

W. F. VILAS, Madison, lawyer—I am not in a position at present to name a choice. It was understood that nothing definite should be decided until the delegation met for consultation. My personal preference, under existing circumstances, is Davis, subject to change after consultation. Tilden might possibly be my second choice. I want an out and out hard money man, and prefer a candidate of that way of thinking. I have no other choice at present than those named.

GEORGE W. BIRD, Jefferson, lawyer—My personal preference is Tilden, because he will crush out corruption wherever found, and that is what the people want. My preference is between Tilden and Davis. It is not based as much on their position on the financial question, because the views of either would preserve the credit and good faith of the country. Tilden has demonstrated that he will not tolerate corruption in any walk of life. My choice, therefore, is Tilden first and Davis second, always subject to change after looking the ground over. Hendricks I regard as one of the finest men in the United States and always felt I would like to vote for him for President if ever opportunity offered. Consider J. R. Doolittle one of the ablest men in the country, but he stands no higher in my estimation than Tilden and Davis.

THIRD DISTRICT.

J. H. EARNEST, Snellsburg, farmer—My first choice at present is Tilden. I am not yet prepared to say who will be my second choice. It will in all probability be Hendricks or Davis or Bayard. The adoption of either of these candidates will depend upon various considerations which cannot yet be applied, so it is useless to talk about second choice now. Personally, I have a leaning toward Hendricks and Bayard, and if I were to consult my own feelings alone I don't know but either would be my first choice in preference to Tilden; but it seems that the Convention was a hard money one and that Tilden was their choice, and unless something turns up he will probably have the support of the united delegation until it is certain he cannot get the nomination, when either Hendricks or Bayard will very likely get our vote. When the President controls so much power as he now does it is time to look out for a good man. I do not think the money question is so vastly important an element in this contest as the politicians want to make it. These professional politicians are doing their best to galvanize this issue into active life, but from what I see and hear I think the people would rather have the whole matter left alone, and what they really care is to see a good, sound man nominated for President who, if elected, will so control the power of the government as to direct it for the public good and not the benefit of the politicians. If such a man appears he is to have my support.

J. T. CARR, editor of the Greene county Reformer, said—My personal judgment is in favor of Tilden, whom I regard as a man who would secure as honest and able an administration as any person in the country. But events have occurred during the past few days which pretty well convince me that he cannot be elected, and that to nominate him would be something like attempting to row up Niagara River. On looking over the field, if my present views respecting Tilden remain unchanged, I shall support Davis. There is no other candidate among those named, except Hancock, that I would care to vote for.

FOURTH DISTRICT.

J. A. HINSEY, Milwaukee, chief detective of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railroad—My first choice is Tilden. He is a hard money man and acceptable to a large majority of the party in this State. The delegation will probably be a unit for him. In the event of Tilden not receiving the nomination I shall be satisfied with Hendricks, conditionally on his proving himself a hard money man. Should he not be found on this plank I would not vote for him at all. Should Hendricks not prove available I should think Thurman would do. He is a man well spoken of, and there is nothing that I am aware of against him. I shall be governed by what transpires at Cincinnati to some extent, but think there can be no mistake in placing Tilden for first choice and Hendricks for second, always reserving, however, the point as to their course on the financial question, which is one of importance in Wisconsin. The name of ex-Senator Doolittle has been mentioned by some. I think he might stand well in the second place on the ticket, and if there are others in our delegation of that opinion I should very likely support him; but he is not considered a candidate for first place.

ALBERT SEMLER, West Bend, insurance agent—So far as I have at present formed a preference it is for Tilden. He is, in my opinion, the most available candidate and will run better in this State than any other man that I have heard of. I am not able to say yet who would be my second choice, having considered Tilden pretty sure of the nomination. I think you will find most of the Wisconsin delegation and a majority of the party in this State agreed on that point. I have been a Tilden man all the time, and shall probably continue one. Hendricks is not my man. I am not sure that he would be my second choice if Tilden should fail to get the nomination, which I do not expect. I am a hard money man and represent a constituency that I consider sound on that question. If Hendricks should take a strong position as a hard money man I don't know but he might be my second choice. It is difficult to say at the moment what I shall do. We can hardly make up our minds on the spur of the moment. Something may occur between this and the Convention to change my views, although I scarcely expect anything to prevent my supporting Tilden until it is clear he cannot be nominated. I had no idea until the Saturday preceding the State Convention of being a delegate, and perhaps am not so well posted as some of the delegation.

FIFTH DISTRICT.

JOSEPH RANKIN, Manitowoc, lumberman—The majority of the party appear to want Tilden, and as he is a good man and a strong candidate I know no reason at present why he should not have the nomination, and I suppose you may set him down as my first choice, always remembering that circumstances may occur to alter this position. The Germans in my district, constituting a large element, are hard money men. They are not what is generally called reformers, but hard money democrats, and Tilden is a favorite candidate among them. You may say they are unanimous for Tilden, and unless something occurs not now foreseen he will be my choice. There is no talk among our people of any one for second choice. At the time of the district Convention there was a very full talk over the nomination, and it appeared to be the general feeling that Tilden should have the support of the delegation, and no second choice was discussed. Davis is looked upon as a good man and should Tilden not receive the nomination I am not sure, as at present advised, but that he would be my second choice. He is quite favorably thought of, but I do not believe any considerable portion of the party have thought seriously of any one but Tilden. The money question has come to be an important element in the contest and none but a hard money man will suit in our district. There may be other hard money men as good as Tilden, but they are not prominently before the people as candidates; we have not heard of them.

FIFTH DISTRICT.

E. C. LEWIS, Juneau, Dodge county, lawyer.—The democrats of the State, so far as I can learn, seem set on Tilden, and I know of no reason why he should not be nominated. I do not put so much stock as some in this finance question, and begin to look upon it as a good deal of a humbug, still it is there, and Tilden seems the most satisfactory man to solve it, and I suppose you may say he is my present first choice. That is the way we speak now but circumstances may alter our views. At present the party in the State seems about solid for him. I have no second choice and don't know any better than you do whom I shall support should Tilden not be nominated. In our own district we are by no means united on the money question; we are about "half and half." Judge Davis is spoken of quite favorably by the moderates and I feel well disposed toward him; so much so that I think, if Tilden fails he would be my second choice. My leaning in his favor, however, is not so decided but that I may have other views before the Convention proceeds to nominate. There are many with us who speak well of Hendricks also, and it is not impossible that he would receive considerable support if Tilden is not nominated. All things considered, however, everything else being equal, I now think Tilden would be my first choice and Davis my second.

SIXTH DISTRICT.

MYRON REED, Waupaca, lawyer—As to my first and second choice I can only say to you that I must be governed by circumstances. I may have my personal leanings, and these may turn out not to agree with the good of the party and would have to be sacrificed. We must await the results flowing from the Convention before forming an intelligent judgment on the situation. There is, for instance, the question of the locality of the candidates of both parties. As at present advised I think you may say I may be for Tilden, but as to second choice I can positively say nothing. My personal preference is perhaps not worth mentioning, but I will state to you that I have a leaning in favor of Hendricks. I do not consider his position on the money question an objection. He is a sound, good man. Our delegation, as you are perhaps aware, may be properly called a "hard money delegation," and Tilden is the choice of the majority. I shall possibly go with the majority unless circumstances change. We have had no meeting yet to decide on these points (with the exception of the informal "talk" at the time of the State Convention), but I believe the general understanding is that Tilden and hard money was the sense of the Convention and must be supported.

SIXTH DISTRICT.

JAMES ROBINSON, Chilton, Calumet county, grocer—There was no meeting of our delegation after the State Convention, so far as I am aware, and therefore I am not well posted, and have deferred making up my mind as to either first or second choice until in a position to confer with the other delegates and otherwise post myself as to the merits of the candidates. I may say, however, that my personal preference is for General Hancock. I do not know what strength the General may have. There is considerable feeling in the democratic party against giving places of power to military men, and this will, doubtless, operate against him. My feeling in his favor is merely personal, and I have no idea at present that he would be my choice, as I shall support only the strongest and best man. I have been told by very able men that if Tilden is nominated he will be beaten by 50,000 majority in this State. That seems to me rather a broad statement, and I receive it with reserve. I admire Tilden, and if Hancock stands no show there are very few men I should like to see nominated better than Tilden. As to the currency question, I think it will take care of itself. Congress, and not the President, will have to deal with that. Davis I regard as a good man. He has considerable strength in the State, particularly in this section. If the first choice of the majority of the delegates was for Tilden and second for Davis I might go with them, unless I was convinced better and stronger men were in the field, of whom I now know nothing. I shall support the men whose candidature looks best for the party.

SEVENTH DISTRICT.

S. N. DICKINSON, of Sparta, lawyer—In my district I have heard Tilden and Davis both well spoken of as the first and second choice that would not be unacceptable to our people. I cannot say that personally I prefer them, or on the other hand that if the rest of the delegation went for Tilden that I might not do so. I look upon Davis as a good man. It is too early yet to decide definitely. There are many things to be considered. Circumstances may arise to change our present views. I shall support the best man. Tilden appears to be the first favorite with most of the delegation. He is liked by the hard money men, of whom there are a large number in my district. The soft money element also is well represented in my section. Bayard, of Delaware, begins to be spoken of. There is some talk also of Hendricks, but Bayard is talked of quite prominently. I do not understand that my constituents claim we should be held to any particular man, and I am not disposed at this early time to pledge myself to Tilden or Hendricks or any other candidate.

A disjointed conversation ensued, it being impossible to ascertain the gentleman's preferences, if he had any, but the general impression conveyed by his replies to questions was he preferred Davis or Bayard, but if the delegation was for Tilden for first choice and either Hendricks or Davis for second he should not stand out against them single handed.

H. H. HAYDEN, Eau Claire, lawyer—Tilden is a good, honest, square man, a reformer, and would be a strong candidate. David Davis, too, would be hard to beat. It is difficult to say, however, that either is the best man in the party. There may be others who would prove still more acceptable. It is not impossible that the "Great Unknown" who has been talked about so much by the papers may yet be found in the bosom of the democratic party. With us we have a large number of very respectable men, whose opinions carry weight in our district, who entertain moderate views of the money question, and the nomination, as you are aware, will depend very much on the stand the candidates have taken on this issue. Personally, I lean toward the repeal of the existing resumption act, and leaving the finances of the country stand where they are for the present. There has been very little talk in my district over the different candidates, and no particular preference shown, so far as I am informed. I believe rather in the doctrine of policy than of men. There are as many soft money republicans as democrats with us. I cannot now state who would be my first and second choice. In further conversation Mr. Hayden intimated that, although not a Tilden man, he might ultimately come to vote for him, although he apparently preferred Davis or Hendricks.

EIGHTH DISTRICT.

J. C. CLARK, Wausau, Marathon county, lumberman (this Wausau is a mere speck sawed out of a vast wilderness)—I am a soft money man, and consequently cannot vote for Tilden unless the arguments in his favor are so powerful that the nomination of any other man would be hopeless. I do not believe in this attempt to force resumption on the country whether we are prepared for it or not. I desire the repeal of this resumption act, and then let the finances of the country alone, leaving it to the enterprise of the people and the natural consequences of trade to adjust the present difficulties. For these reasons I should support Davis in preference to Tilden. I think Davis is a very good man, and would make quite a strong run if nominated. Tilden will do very well for second choice if Davis cannot be nominated, although I hope some one favorable to the repeal of the resumption act will be selected should it be hopeless to attempt to nominate Davis or any other man of the stamp I require. I don't know if the delegation is a unit for Tilden, but I would go with the rest, for the sake of harmony, although against my judgment. I think the resumption men make a mistake in supposing the country can be forced to resume, but that we may be able to work up to resumption if the finances of the country are left alone. It is this tinkering with trade matters and legislative interference with the natural laws of trade that have unsettled the country. I want a man for President who takes this view of the situation.

WILLIAM WILSON, Menomonee, farmer, reputed the largest in the State of Wisconsin—I do not know at present that I should very strongly oppose the nomination of Mr. Tilden by the St. Louis Convention; but I certainly am not hotly in favor of it. As at present advised I believe there are men in the party who will make a better run. I am not fully informed as to the strength of any of the candidates at the East, but feel confident Davis will be a stronger candidate and run better than Tilden at the West, and that he will be more acceptable to the district I represent. I am not a soft money man, and do not base my support of Davis on that ground. I believe in moderation on this finance question. Times are sufficiently hard at present, without pinching us tighter with forcing a policy that will strain the country more than the country, in my belief, is prepared to stand. I am not immovably for Davis for first choice, although he is undoubtedly my first choice now, but I am, first and last, for the man of most merit, and Davis appears to me to have a large share of that. If Davis cannot be had and the delegation are strong for Tilden, and no better man can be nominated, you can set me down first choice for Davis and second for Tilden.

IOWA.

THE DELEGATION INCLINES TOWARD TILDEN, BUT IS UNDECIDED.

DES MOINES, June 18, 1876.

The democratic party of this State is not a bold organization. It is bitter and aggressive enough in its assaults on the republican party, but when controversy rears aloft its head within the party lines there soon appears a spirit of amiable caution and noncommittal discretion the like of which is not seen in the opposition ranks. The republicans, secure in their heavy majority, often wage war among themselves, get up a bit of a row and take their brethren by the hair, but with the democrats the need of unity and harmony quickly suppresses all sounds of intestine strife. When your correspondent passed through the State interviewing the delegates to Cincinnati he had to use but little journalistic tact to secure from each a full and frank avowal of his Presidential preferences. The delegates felt that they came from one of the banner States of strong and earnest republicanism, one whose will was potent, and they gave utterance to their choice in tones of decided emphasis. Very different has it been with the democrats; they feel that in the national council of the party their voice is but weak, and they are content to sit on the back seats and sing in soft accompaniment to their stronger brethren on the front seats. Thus it is altogether impossible to get from the Iowa delegates to St. Louis an expression as to their choice of a candidate. Whatever was best for the party would be their choice and the will of the majority would be their will. The State Register (rep.) said of this delegation at the time of its selection:—"It is a sharp and shrewd delegation, and the best that can be said of it, with certainty, is that it will drive a sharp bargain for Iowa at St. Louis, and look first to the question of success rather than to any certain candidate." This view of the situation has been fully confirmed by the delegates themselves in personal conference with your correspondent. One thing, however, may be affirmed with certainty, and that is that, as matters now stand, the delegation is largely for Tilden. They think that his nomination would secure them New York as against Wheeler. Though thus cautious and doubtful in its party management, the democratic party of this State has within its lines many of the ablest men of the State, and they will make a strong fight next fall. The one thing they fear most just now is the financial question. Tilden would be much stronger with the Iowa delegation were it not for his financial views. The Iowa delegates seem to apprehend much trouble over this question at St. Louis. But to the particulars of the interviews had by your correspondent with the delegates:—

DELEGATES AT LARGE.

HON. D. O. FINCH is a prominent lawyer and politician of Des Moines. He is a man of great ability and influence, and is one of the most popular orators in the West. Though never an office-holder he is a veteran in politics and of large experience. He favors Tilden, though not entirely committed to him.

M. M. HAM, editor of the Dubuque Herald, is another leader of the party and one of the cautious men. He declares that he has no choice as yet. Your correspondent feels justified, however, in marking him for Tilden.

Judge H. H. TRIMBLE is another Tilden man with an "if" to it—the "if" covering all contingencies on the financial question.

Colonel B. F. MONTGOMERY, of Council Bluffs, is a lawyer of fine ability. He hesitates between Tilden and Hendricks and, with entire impartiality, favors one to-day and the other to-morrow.

DISTRICT DELEGATES.

FIRST DISTRICT.

EDMUND JAEGER, of Keokuk, is understood to favor Tilden, though he declines to indicate his choice in a decided manner. He favors Doolittle, of Wisconsin, for Vice President.

D. W. MCKITTINCK, of Burlington, is a man of strong influence in the party. He declares with emphasis that his first choice is General Hancock.

SECOND DISTRICT.

A. J. MONROE, of Jones county, wants a candidate who will embody the reform sentiment, and so favors Tilden; but if circumstances demanded it he would cheerfully vote for another.

E. H. THAYER, editor of the Clinton Age, says his sympathies are with Governor Tilden, whose nomination would mean reform, the watchword of the democratic party.

THIRD DISTRICT.

HON. L. L. AINSWORTH is a Representative in Congress and out of your correspondent's reach. He is understood here to favor Tilden.

C. M. DURHAM, of Independence, is a Hendricks man as first choice, with Tilden as second.

FOURTH DISTRICT.

Captain G. R. MILLER, a lawyer of Cerro Gordo, has had quite an experience in politics. He would like Tilden, with Davis or Lamar, or Hendricks, with an Eastern or Southern man for Vice President.

G. C. WRIGHT, of Bremer county, is a Tilden man, with Hendricks for second choice. Would like ex-Governor Curtin or Thurman for Vice President.

FIFTH DISTRICT.

Peter A. DEY, of Iowa City, declines to commit himself, but is no doubt a Tilden man at present.

L. G. KINNE, a former republican, makes no sign, but is quoted as a Tilden man by those pretending to know.

SIXTH DISTRICT.

H. B. HENDERSHOTT, of Ottumwa, has declared himself for Hendricks.

T. J. ANDERSON, of Knoxville, is an unknown quantity, with a weakness toward Tilden.

SEVENTH DISTRICT.

D. M. BAKER, of Chariton, is for Tilden, with several contingencies to it.

V. WAINWRIGHT, of Winterset, would like to vote for Thurman if he could get a chance. Thinks Tilden is unfortunate in his own State in having a divided support.

EIGHTH DISTRICT.

JACOB WILLIAMS, editor of the Council Bluffs Globe, is somewhat undecided. Between two such good men as Tilden and Hendricks he declares it difficult to make a choice.

W. A. STONE, of Sidney, has declared himself for Hendricks. He would cheerfully support Tilden as a second choice.

NINTH DISTRICT.

JOHN P. ALLISON, of Sioux City, is in doubt yet, but thinks well of Tilden.

T. L. BOWMAN, the other delegate, is understood to be a Tilden man, and was put on the delegation with that understanding.

MINNESOTA.

THE DELEGATION A UNIT FOR TILDEN—HANCOCK PROBABLY THEIR SECOND CHOICE.

ST. PAUL, June 19, 1876.

As is the practice of both parties in Minnesota, the delegation to the St. Louis Convention is wholly accredited from the State Convention, which met in this city on the 1st inst. But when the Convention had selected one delegate at large it resolved itself into three Congressional district caucuses, each of which nominated three gentlemen, who were thereupon appointed by the Convention to constitute the State delegation. The delegation thus chosen is as follows:—

At Large—Eugene M. Wilson, of Minneapolis.

For the First District—J. H. McKenny, of Chatfield, Fillmore county; Daniel Buck, of Mankato, Blue Earth county, and C. F. Buck, of Winona.

For the Second District—Michael Doran, of Le Sueur; J. F. Norrish, of Hastings, and George E. Skinner, of Faribault.

For the Third District—William Lee, of St. Paul; T. G. Mealey, of Monticello, Wright county, and J. N. Castle, of Stillwater.

These gentlemen were all present at the State Convention, and were interviewed within a few hours of their election by your correspondent as to their personal preferences in connection with the St. Louis nomination for the Presidency. Although two of them were before that reported in favor of the nomination of General Hancock, they all declared themselves bound by the action of the Convention to support Mr. Tilden. More than that they would not say, except (and this was said with a uniformity which suggested the thought that they had already consulted together); that they felt it would be unwise and improper for the delegation from Minnesota—being unable to certainly promise an electoral vote to any democratic candidate—to hold any preferences which they would not yield to the necessities or even the positive preferences of representatives of the democratic States. The action of the State Convention, by which the St. Louis delegates declare themselves bound, was as follows:—First, before electing delegates, the adoption of a resolution declaring "that in Governor Samuel J. Tilden we recognize the representative reformer of the times, and believe that his nomination for the Presidency will be the best course of the democracy to secure the reforms for which our party is so earnestly striving, and which are so essential to the very life of our nation." This resolution was objected to by a considerable minority, but mainly on the ground of expediency. The zealous Tilden man in the Convention became somewhat alarmed by this opposition, and it was proposed to instruct the delegation to vote as a unit in accordance with the will of a majority of its members. This proposition revived disagreeable recollections of the effect of the unit rule upon the Minnesota delegation of 1860, and was rejected. Then the Tilden men required and received assurances that every delegate would honestly support Tilden's nomination, these assurances being given before they would consider any name proposed for the delegation. After the St. Louis delegates had been appointed, one of the four members of the Convention who had opposed the Tilden resolution, on the ground of other preferences, offered the following:—

Resolved, That this Convention has full confidence in the delegates elected to represent them at St. Louis, and that we have an abiding faith that they will do all that is necessary for the honor and success of the democratic party; and to this extent and no more are they instructed.

This was opposed in debate as calculated to discredit the Tilden resolution and was laid on the table without division. The discussion at this time showed that the Tilden men were incensed and united and that they numbered an overwhelming majority of the Convention.

Hon. E. M. WILSON, the delegate at large, gained that position by introducing the Tilden resolution, but was, when the Convention first assembled, rumored to be for Hancock. He said to your correspondent last Saturday evening that he believed the first choice of every one of the delegation was now Mr. Tilden. He felt also that the delegation was bound to vote for Mr. Tilden by the action of the State Convention and because he is undoubtedly the choice of a large majority of the party in this State. To the question who was his personal second choice he frankly replied, "General Hancock." Being asked if he knew the personal preferences of others of the delegation he answered that, after Tilden, he did not—that is, from late conversation or correspondence, but he was of opinion that if it should come to a second choice General Hancock would be the man for the Minnesota delegation.

WILLIAM LEE, now and for several years past Chairman of the Democratic State Committee, just after the State Convention said he might be guided by what he should learn at St. Louis from the delegates representing the democratic States, yet it was his purpose to carry out the expressed wishes of the party in this State, so far as could reasonably be expected. He said to your correspondent Saturday that the Minnesota delegates would give their united votes to Mr. Tilden, and he had no doubt of his nomination. But if it should become necessary to make another choice they would be governed by circumstances which they could not fully understand until they had met and consulted with the delegates from other States.

J. H. MCKENNY is editor of the most prosperous country (democratic) paper in the State, and, before and since the State Convention, has kept at the head of his editorial page these lines:—

"FOR PRESIDENT
("subject to the decision of the Democratic National Convention), SAMUEL J. TILDEN, of New York."

C. F. BUCK, of Winona, is one of the most enthusiastic Tilden men in the State, and will not admit that he has or can need to have a second choice.

D. BUCK, of Mankato, is an original Tilden man, and says his second choice would be the one nearest like Tilden as a representative of reform and democratic principles.

MICHAEL DORAN, of Le Sueur, was also for Tilden from the first, and was willing that the delegation should be instructed for him or to vote as a unit.

JOHN F. NORRISH, of Hastings, is for Tilden all the time, and hopes not to have to make a second choice.

GEORGE E. SKINNER was one of the Rice county delegation in the State Convention, instructed by the County Convention unanimously to vote for no man for delegate to the St. Louis Convention who was not known to be for Tilden. He has no second choice and knows of no democrat in his county who has.

T. G. MEALEY, of Wright county, was originally for Hancock, who will now be his second choice.

J. N. CASTLE, of Stillwater, was a warm advocate of Tilden in the State Convention. He has no doubt about Tilden being nominated, but if a second choice is necessary his will depend upon the preferences shown by democrats from the democratic States at St. Louis.

NEBRASKA.

THE DELEGATION FOR TILDEN AS FIRST AND THURMAN AS SECOND CHOICE.

OMAHA, June 16, 1876.

The following is a classification of the preferences of the delegation from this State to St. Louis:—

	1st Choice.	2d Choice.	3d Choice.
George L. Miller	Tilden	Thurman	None
Alexander Bear	Tilden	Thurman	None
Tobias Castor	Tilden	Thurman	Doolittle
G. B. Schofield	Tilden	Thurman	None
F. D. Harmon	Tilden	Thurman	None
Charles McDonald	Tilden	None	None

The delegates were not instructed, but they will be the last to desert Tilden. There is a strong feeling among them to advance the claims of Colonel J. F. Warner, of Nebraska, for second place on the ticket.

THE ALDERMEN AND THEIR TRAIN.

The Tammany special train for St. Louis left the Grand Central Depot last evening at eight o'clock. It consisted of thirteen palace cars and a baggage car. The latter was labelled "Tammany Special." After this came a car on which was the inscription "New York Common Council." The middle panel of this car was also covered with white muslin, bearing the inscription, "John Kelly." The train, which was supposed to carry no one but those who were opposed to the nomination of Governor Tilden at St. Louis, was scarcely half filled, some of the cars having but two or three occupants. In fact the number of passengers was so small as to excite the wonder of all the spectators who were admitted to the depot as to what had become of the outside Tammany "shouters." There was a want of enthusiasm apparent among both passengers and those who had come to see them off, and scarcely a cheer was given as the train moved from the depot. In the car set apart for the Common Council and their friends were Aldermen Purroy, John Reilly, Gumbleton, Sheils, Seary, Keenan, McCarthy, Sauer, Cole and Guntzer, Commissioner Nichols, ex-Alderman Flannigan, Coroners, Woltman and Croker, Ed. Kearney, A. H. Purdy, Commissioner Murphy, Ed. Donohue, Bernard Reilly, Tyler Kelly, Peter Gillespie, Peter Trainor, General Spinola, Ed. Callaghan and W. Moloney. Among those who occupied the other cars were C. H. Haswell, Thomas Dunlap, Dr. Colman, John McKeon, ex-Judge Quinn, Colonel J. Bagley, ex-Alderman Kerr, Judge Hartman, Judge Spencer, A. Shehan, Colonel Mooney, Judge Barbour, Judson Jarvis, M. Patton, J. Seebacher, J. F. Brennan and C. Dowd.

The train is expected to arrive at St. Louis on Sunday morning between six and seven o'clock, the Central Railroad Company having declared its intention to beat the trains on the Erie and Pennsylvania roads.

A PARKER DELEGATION.

Those of the New Jersey Parker delegation who did not start for St. Louis on Thursday left yesterday. Their quarters will be at the Southern Hotel. Leon Abbett, of Hudson, will be chairman and A. J. Smith secretary. Yesterday quite a party of enthusiastic Parker men started from Newark via the Erie Road. At Paterson the party was reinforced by the Passaic county delegation, including Senators Hopper and Dayton, of Bergen. The wildest enthusiasm prevails among the Parker men.

AN ELEMENT OF SUCCESS.

NEW YORK, June 23, 1876.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD:—

The democrats ought to nominate either Tilden or Thurman or some one whose name ends in an N, or at least has an N in it. Look over the list of Presidents (elected such by the people) and see how many names end in that letter and how few are without it altogether. This is the real reason why neither Seymour nor Greeley could defeat Grant, and for the same reason the democrats will have by far the better chance of winning now if they will only study the lessons of experience. Either Tilden or Thurman would be pretty sure to defeat Hayes, and I think Cooper, too! And then there's ex Governor Hoffman, who might put two N's at the end of his name! How is it that he is never mentioned in this connection? He would be sure of success (with the double N), and would make an excellent President.

D. N. E.

POLITICAL NOTES.

Newark (N. J.) Journal:—"In the present temper of the people Mr. Parker, we are sure, would carry New Jersey by at least 20,000 majority."

Cleveland Plaindealer:—"Hayes is being twitted so much upon being a numbskull and nonentity that he should hurl the words of Blaine at his detractors:—'I do not feel that I shall prove a deadhead in the enterprise; I see various channels in which I know I can be useful.'"

Rochester Democrat:—"Dan Voorhees calls Tilden 'a wrecker of railroads and a political huckster,' and predicts that if he shall be nominated the entire vote of the Northwest will be for the republican nominee."

Gettysburg (Pa.) Compiler:—"It is remarked that the republican party has been distinctly unlucky of late, and it was very proper that its nominations should have been made on Friday."

Chicago Courier:—"A reformer will lead off at St. Louis and a reformer will be the nominee."

Cincinnati Enquirer:—"Hayes is understood to be preparing his letter of acceptance. That clear sounding specie resumption, hard money plank is expected to challenge his admiration. He will linger feelingly over that."

Milwaukee Commercial Times:—"The simplicity of Milwaukee democrats speaks well for their honesty and for nothing else. They have allowed themselves to be persistently run or balked in their own plans by tricky republicans."

Boston Post:—"The Chicago Times thinks it was in accordance with the eternal fitness of things that the Cincinnati nominations were made on hangman's day. The platform is a tiptop scaffold, too."

Boston Globe:—"The reform idea is not pinned to any single man. If the Republican Convention had nominated Bristow and secured his election he would have been powerless for reform without a Congress to sustain him. We have lost the services of the great thief killer at the head of the government, but his work has shown what can be done and given a strong impetus to the reform idea among the people."

Worcester (Mass.) Press:—"Grant is becoming positively garrulous in his expressions of satisfaction over Blaine's defeat."

New Haven Palladium:—"Mr. Hendricks positively declines to be a candidate for the Vice Presidency, and it is also reported that Mr. Sam Bowles' candidate, Judge Davis, is growing modest, and begs that his name may not be used at all."

Philadelphia Press:—"Upon the Southern people especially the nomination of Hayes and Wheeler has produced a wholesome impression. There is nothing so convincing as success; nothing more salutary than power wielded with moderation."

St. Louis Times:—"As the candidate of the party which has mercilessly plundered the people during fifteen years of administration Hayes cannot carry even Ohio against a democrat in whom the people have confidence."

Nashville American:—"Grant never intended by his Des Moines "no Popery" speech, last October, to make Hayes a 'bigger man than old Grant' in the Cincinnati Convention, but that's just what it did."

Buffalo Courier:—"It has been well said that the very name of the Presidential candidate ought to be a watchword of reform. If the platform manifests the earnest purpose of the party and if its standard bearer is a recognized exponent of the great issue of administrative reform we need have no doubt as to the result. The cause of the democracy will be the cause of the country, and may safely be confided to the judgment and patriotism of the people."

Springfield (Mass.) Union:—"It is just as well to nail that lie at once which charges Governor Hayes with being one of the back pay salary grabbers. The salary bill for which Hayes voted while in Congress was that of 1866, which increased salaries of Congressmen from $3,000 to $5,000. This bill was neither condemned at the time nor ever since, the increase being only a reasonable one. It had no connection with the back pay salary grab of 1873, and at the time that measure was passed Hayes had not been in Congress for seven years."

Cleveland Plaindealer:—"Hayes was a member of Congress in 1866, when the salary of Congressmen was raised from $3,000 to $5,000 by being meanly tacked upon the Soldiers' Bounty bill. This steal was worse than the back pay grab, for that was put through on its merits in the House."

Philadelphia Times:—"Nearly the entire democratic country press of Pennsylvania call for Hancock."

Hartford Times:—"The popular voice is for Tilden, retrenchment and pure government. Give us this ticket and the platform of sound principles, and the constitutional party will win the triumph in November. A weak and unsound platform and weak nomination would dishearten the host of voters who desire to overthrow the corrupt party now in power. The man is of more consequence than the platform, but both ought to be sound. We have faith that they will be. The two-thirds rule should not be permitted to defeat the wishes of the people."

THE TROT.

First Heat.—Trojan had the call in the betting, Lady Jefferson second choice, White Stockings being third in favor. Lady Jefferson went off with the lead, and the other two breaking up on the way to the quarter pole, Jefferson passed that point in 42¾ seconds, six lengths in front of Trojan, who was six lengths ahead of White Stockings. At the half-mile pole—time, 1:25—Lady Jefferson was ten lengths ahead of Trojan, the latter two lengths in front of White Stockings. Going up the hill of the homestretch White Stockings passed Trojan and gained rapidly on Lady Jefferson, but after a very close race Lady Jefferson won the heat by a head in 2:57.

Second Heat.—Lady Jefferson took the lead and soon opened a wide gap. She was half a dozen lengths ahead at the quarter pole in 43 seconds, White Stockings second, Trojan third. The latter soon afterward broke up and lost considerable ground. At the half mile pole Lady Jefferson was eight lengths in front in 1:22, Whitestockings second. Lady Jefferson trotted steadily home, while the others had a succession of breaks. Lady Jefferson won by over eighty yards, Trojan second, two lengths ahead of White Stockings. Time of the heat, 2:50. White Stockings and Trojan were declared distanced, and thus ended the affair.

Second Heat.—Grocery Girl took the lead with the word, and was two lengths in front at the quarter pole in 42¾ seconds. Lady Hildreth broke up just after passing that point and lost ten lengths. Grocery Girl then waited for the other, and was only two lengths in front at the half-mile pole. Time, 1:30. Grocery Girl trotted no faster than was required to keep in front of the other and came in a winner by three lengths in 3:05.

The inaugural meeting of the Point Breeze Park Association at Philadelphia begins to-day, to be continued on Monday, June 26; Tuesday, 27th, and Wednesday, 28th. The first race to-day will be the Inaugural Sweepstakes, for all ages, a dash of a mile and a half, to name at the post. There were twenty-six nominations and the probability is that there will be a large field of starters. The second race will be for the Reform Club Stakes, by fillies three years old, a dash of one mile and a quarter. This event closed with twenty-three nominations and should have a large number of starters. The third race will be a dash of three-quarters of a mile, for maidens of all ages, and the fourth a grand race of two-mile heats, for all ages, the whole making a bill of fare that will entice many a man from his home to enjoy.

THE LONG BRANCH RACES.

LONG BRANCH, N. J., June 23, 1876.

The following stables have arrived at the Monmouth Park race track and are in training for the races which begin Saturday, July 1:—Lorillard, Belmont, Cottrill, Carr & Co., Astor, Chamberlin, Weldon, McGrath, Babcock and Hitchcock. The track is in excellent order. One hundred and sixty horses have already arrived and 100 more are expected to-morrow.

THE AMERICAN HORSES IN ENGLAND.

[From the Sporting Times, June 10.]

The Hampton Court yearlings will be sold next Saturday and the Cobham on the following Saturday is Ascot week, while the whole of Mr. Brayley's breeding stud will be brought to the hammer during the Stockbridge Meeting. Among the visitors at Middle Park last Saturday was Mr. M. H. Sanford, who returns to America this week to prepare for his own annual sale of the Preakness yearlings on the 29th of this month. Preakness—after which the fine old 10-year-old champion of Mr. Sanford's racing team at Newmarket is called—is a small stream that also gives the name to a valley about eighteen miles from New York, and empties itself into the Passaic Falls. It is at Preakness where Mr. Sanford has his racing establishment, but his breeding stud is 1,200 miles away in the "blue grass" region of Kentucky, and far from the stud of Mr. Alexander, the largest breeder in the United States, whose yearlings are sold the week before Mr. Sanford's. It was at Mr. Alexander's sales Mr. Sanford bought Preakness, Mate, Bay Final and Black Prince (who form part of his English lot) at that age; while the remainder he bred himself, but repurchased at a loss, from having made it a rule never to buy in a single lot at his own sales under any consideration whatever, whatever waggish suggestion might arise in this country from the fact of his auctioneer being named "Kidd." The name of Mr. Sanford's stud farm is North Elkhorn, which is six miles from Lexington, on the Maysville Pike, where he has the large number of seventy-five brood mares, all descended from English blood, fifty of which never had a saddle on their backs! For the service of these mares there are five sires—viz., Glenelg, Baywood, Monarchist, King Lear and Virgil—all sons of Lexington, the Stockwell of America, except the first and last named. Glenelg is by Citadel out of Bapta and enjoys the reputation at the present moment of being the best English horse ever sent to America—a hard nut for the believers in Priam, Glencoe, Buzzard, Barefoot, Tranby, Trustee, Highflyer, Margrave, Belshazzar, Diomed, Sovereign, Knight of St. George, Scythian, Leamington and other imported English celebrities to crack—while Virgil is a son of Vandal (by Glencoe) and the sire of Vagrant and Virginius, the three-year-old champions of the West and East in 1875. Mr. Sanford considers Monarchist the best horse he ever possessed, but, unfortunately, his great superiority was only discovered when too late to send him over to run for the Derby in 1871, in which he was engaged. Baywood never started, owing to his leg giving way; but he is one of the most successful sires in America. Until Mr. Sanford set the example and persuaded Mr. Alexander to erect hovels for his mares and young stock they ran out the whole year unsheltered, having to paw away the snow to get at the grass during the winter, at which season certain fields of peculiar growth were reserved for their use. Late foals are preferred in America, for this sensible reason—which is confirmatory of the late Sir Joseph Hawley's theory—that when the grass is sweetest the youngsters thrive so much better, and "earn their livelihood" more heartily. The difference between English and American oats, which averages forty-five pounds against the latter's thirty pounds, makes all the difference in the rearing of young stock. The Preakness yearlings to be disposed of at the forthcoming sale number thirty-seven, viz., thirteen colts and twenty-four fillies; and it is not unlikely that the result of Mr. Sanford's recent visit to England may prove most advantageous to the American Turf, as he makes no secret of his estimate that the thoroughbred horses of that country are at least a stone behind the English.—Parvo.

FACTIOUS FIRST WARDERS.

THE SHANAHANS VERSUS THE O'CONNORS—BATTLE BETWEEN THE LEADERS AND RETAINERS.

The First ward of New York, which is sometimes called the Thirty-third county of Ireland, but which in reality combines in the elements of its population not only the natives of all the counties of Ireland, but of all the provinces and districts of Germany and France, besides a good mixture of pure Anglo-Saxon, was the scene on Thursday last of a premature riot.

There is one block on Washington street, between Morris and Rector, which is known as the Kerry Block. Here, for years, the O'Connors have held full sway, and in political parlance they controlled the election "deestrick." There were three brothers, known respectively as Daniel D., alias "Dan D. O.," "David D." and John D. O'Connor. Daniel D. O'Connor keeps a liquor store, which is the resort of all the wild youths in the neighborhood, and, although nothing can be said against his own character individually, his patrons were always looked upon as among the worst characters in the ward. Here the members of an association called the "Franklin"—now the George Muller Chowder Club—used to meet and hold high revelry as it is stated the proprietor knew they would settle their bills when their business became lucrative. Most of these young men who drank in O'Connor's place were looked upon by the residents of the ward and the police as professional thieves. Daniel D. O'Connor, however, kept his patrons under pretty good control, and while Henry Smith, Police Commissioner, lived he was a power in the ward. Since then, however, his name and his fame dwindled, and his patrons left him by degrees. The Franklin Association split up on account of many internecine quarrels in it. A number of cliques and thieves destroyed their usefulness to themselves, much to the benefit of the community in general.

WITH OR WITHOUT MONEY,

THE ROW BEGINS.

On Wednesday night a number of this excellent company went to Mrs. Lynch's opening, at No. 4 Greenwich street. They were enjoying themselves according to their wont when they were broke in upon by another crowd and on account of insufficient numbers they made a hasty retreat. It is charged that the assailing party were under the immediate direction of Daniel D. O'Connor.

The quarrel was not allowed to slumber, and on Thursday, at noon, David D. O'Connor met the leader of the opposing faction, "Buck" Shanahan, in front of Daniel O'Connor's store, and the fight was renewed. O'Connor was struck on the head and thrown to the sidewalk. His friends soon gathered, as also did the friends of the Shanahan, and an old fashioned hand-to-hand fight soon began. The Mallow House, which is on the corner of Rector and Washington streets, poured forth its crowd, and they joined hands with the O'Connors. "Buck" Shanahan and his friends were then between two fires, and they retreated as best they could. In the mêlée, however, Shanahan drew a revolver and fired at O'Connor, wounding him in the left forearm. Shanahan then ran into a liquor store on the corner of Morris and West streets and intrenched himself behind the bar. He fired about seven shots, one of them wounding a young man named Callahan, of the house Mallow.

Eight of the rioters were arrested by officers of the Twenty-seventh precinct on Thursday night. They were brought before Judge Wandell at the Tombs Police Court yesterday, but were discharged, because neither Captain Saunders nor his officers could prefer any specific charge against them.

The prisoners are what is known as the "Stable Gang," and are looked upon with terror even by the inhabitants of the First ward. One of the prisoners, named Anderson, was arrested last Saturday night for highway robbery at the foot of Dey street and discharged for want of evidence. A number of the others are well known to the police, and have been arrested at different times for various offences.

THE KERRY GANG AND THE STABLE GANG.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD:—

I noticed in your morning edition that the "Stable gang" tried to murder Buck Shanahan in the fight of Thursday in the First ward. It is not so. It was the crowd of thieves that lounge in Dan D. O'Connor's store, No. 10 Washington street, known to the police as the "Kerry gang," of which Dan D. O'Connor and Michael Calahan, both men, are the leaders. Respectable citizens are in danger of their lives, especially by O'Connor's gang. The "stable gang" do not harm any one, as D. D. O'Connor states. The police officers on that post are controlled by Dan D. O'Connor. One of the officers stood by and saw Dan O'Connor's beat a young man on Wednesday night, and when the young man told the officer to arrest O'Connor the officer said, "Give him more, Dan." This case ought to be looked into, as citizens are annoyed by O'Connor's gang. Yours truly,

A CONSTANT READER OF THE HERALD AND A FIRST WARD CITIZEN.

MICROSCOPIC OBSCENITY.

Yesterday afternoon Mr. Anthony Comstock arrested Joseph Schloss on the charge of selling obscene pictures and lodged him in the Sixteenth precinct station house. The arrest caused great surprise in the neighborhood of the prisoner's place of business, No. 229 West Twenty-fourth street, as heretofore he has borne a character which in no way prepared those who knew him for any such revelation. Schloss professed to do business as a real estate agent; but it came to Mr. Comstock's knowledge that he was engaged in the questionable occupation of selling obscene microscopic charms. Mr. Comstock, therefore, went to Schloss' place of business with a friend, whom he instructed to purchase some of the charms, while he himself pretended to apply for a room. The friend did as directed, Comstock listening to the whole transaction, which terminated in the supposed buyer purchasing seventy-five of the charms for $25. As soon as the charms were handed over Comstock arrested Schloss, and seized 150 of these articles, which he will produce in the Jefferson Market Police Court this morning, where Schloss will be taken for examination.

FIRE IN WESTCHESTER.

The large frame building recently used as a nitro-glycerine factory, near Woodlawn, Westchester county, caught fire yesterday afternoon and was completely destroyed. It is understood that about two tons of the dangerous combustible mentioned was stored only a few yards distant from the burned structure. The loss is about $2,000. It will be remembered that an explosion occurred in this factory last March, which resulted in the loss of five lives.

WITH SUPPLEMENT.

NEW YORK, SATURDAY, JUNE 24, 1876.

From our reports this morning the probabilities are that the weather to-day will be partly cloudy and warmer.

During the summer months the HERALD will be sent to subscribers in the country at the rate of twenty-five cents per week, free of postage.

NOTICE TO COUNTRY NEWSDEALERS.—For prompt and regular delivery of the HERALD by fast mail trains orders must be sent direct to this office. Postage free.

WALL STREET YESTERDAY.—Although dull the stock market was at times feverish. Prices were firm. Gold declined from 112 1-4 to 112 and closed weak. Money on call loaned at 2 1-2 and 2 per cent. Government bonds were less active and railway bonds generally firm.

THE PUNISHMENT OF EXPULSION from the Reform Club of London has been visited on two prominent English liberals for supporting the tory government. This is party discipline with a vengeance.

THE FIRST SHOT.—The first election shot against Hayes is that he took the back pay. This is a picket shot. After the Fourth we shall have things livelier. It will be a dull canvass if Hayes and Wheeler are not accused of highway robbery before October.

POLICE BRUTALITIES are becoming so alarmingly frequent that our citizens will soon come to regard the patrolman as a danger, instead of a protection, unless the Police Commissioners interfere. As long as positions on the force are made rewards for political service this disgraceful state of affairs will continue.

AN INDIARUBBER TICKET.—The republicans have nominated an indiarubber ticket and platform. They suit everybody—from Soft Money Kelley to Hard Money Woodford, from Protection Casey to Free Trade Opdyke, from George William Curtis to Boss Shepherd. It is wonderful how a party will enjoy porridge and milk when it can find nothing better.

THE MARKED DEPRECIATION IN THE VALUE OF SILVER is causing uneasiness and considerable discussion in England, and yet the decline is steadily progressing. The Bank of England has a plethora of bullion in the vaults, which must necessarily depress the market. The subject of the low value of silver is one that should enlist the attention of our national financiers.

MORE WATCHFULNESS is needed at our city hospitals over patients liable to fits of delirium. A woman under treatment at the Centre Street Hospital attempted to reach the street from a high window during the absence of her attendant, and is now dying from the effects of a terrible fall on the pavement. The danger of a similar calamity might be obviated by a few iron bars placed across the windows and by proper vigilance on the part of the nurses.

NEWPORT CONTINUES to be the favorite seaside summer resort this year, and we publish in to-day's HERALD a long list of visitors already settled down there for the season. Everything that can contribute to the enjoyment of summer life at Newport will be secured to the visitors, and we learn that outdoor sports, such as polo, pigeon shooting, rifle matches, coaching and other equally enjoyable and exciting amusements, will form a part of the grand programme for the coming season.

THE CENTENNIAL RIFLE MATCH.—The correspondent, "Creedmoor," who furnishes some interesting comparisons between the practice shooting of the American and Irish riflemen in their competitions for the respective teams, must remember that the Irishmen have not concluded their shooting for the selection of a team, and that, except for an approximation, no comparison is absolutely reliable where the shooting to be compared does not come off at the same time and place, or under conditions precisely similar. Hence it looks a little cruel to place the Irish and American percentages side by side. The HERALD has avoided this, merely stating that the average of our riflemen was slightly higher than anything we had heard of from the other side of the Atlantic. Apart from the question of taste, it is safer for our riflemen to contain their jubilation until the match is over, when we shall be glad of the opportunity to join their shout of victory.

The Two-thirds Rule.

According to present appearances the greatest obstacle to the success of Governor Tilden at St. Louis will be the two-thirds rule. He will enter the Convention with about the same relative strength that Mr. Blaine had at Cincinnati; but Mr. Blaine would have been nominated if he could have obtained a majority of the votes, whereas Governor Tilden cannot succeed with anything less than two-thirds of the whole number, unless the rule should be discarded. It is quite possible that a demonstration may be made against it, but the success of such an attempt is more than doubtful. If Governor Tilden were absolutely sure of a majority on the first ballot it might be a safe experiment, for a simple majority is all that is necessary to set aside the two-thirds rule. But it is not expected that Tilden will start with a majority, and it cannot be known what his exact strength is until after a ballot. If an attempt should be made to dispense with the rule the vote on that question would be regarded as a test of Tilden's strength, and as some of his sincere supporters might vote for the rule, and all his hollow supporters would be pretty sure to do so, his opponents would gain a triumph at the outset, which would impair his prestige. It is for his interest to appear as strong as possible in the first test, and it would be fatal to make that test in the preliminary proceedings unless the result were known beforehand to be beyond doubt or question. We incline to think that his friends will regard it as an experiment too hazardous to be made. Even a majority of the New York delegation might be found voting to sustain the rule; and every such vote, however intended, would be construed as hostile to Tilden. A proposal to repeal the rule is quite as likely to be instigated by his enemies as his friends, in order to bring his strength to this insidious test and damage him before the balloting begins.

The first thing every Convention does after electing its officers is to adopt the rules which are to govern its proceedings. This is always done by a simple majority, so that the friends of any candidate who has a firm and perfectly assured majority may easily vote down the two-thirds rule. It may be said that this did not prove to be the case in 1844, when Mr. Van Buren entered the Convention with a clear majority of pledged delegates; but the reply is that many of them were glad of an opportunity to violate their pledge in substance while keeping it in form. After the fatal letter on the annexation of Texas, which he was entrapped into writing, many of the delegates who had been chosen to support him desired his defeat, and support of the two-thirds rule was a convenient method of enabling them to vote for Van Buren, as they had been instructed, without incurring any danger of his nomination. In the same manner, if any of the professed Tilden delegates at St. Louis are willing to see him defeated their support of the two-thirds rule would enable them to desert in reality while keeping faith in appearance. As his supporters cannot know at the outset how much secret disaffection there may be in their own ranks they are not likely to force the matter to a test in advance of the first ballot. An attempt to get rid of the rule in his interest would be interpreted as a symptom of weakness and a confession that he could not be nominated in accordance with established party usage, and a failure of the attempt would be proclaimed by his opponents as the destruction of his chances. It seems more probable, therefore, that the two-thirds rule will be readopted without serious opposition.

The most common argument against the two-thirds rule is that it was a cunning device of Southern politicians for defeating a Northern candidate who was not subservient to their policy. Even if this were accurate in point of fact it would be a maladroit line of argument to be taken up by Governor Tilden's friends at St. Louis. It is their cue to court the Southern delegates. They cannot afford to rake up old grievances by dwelling upon that part of the history of the two-thirds rule. Besides, while it is true enough that the Southern politicians worked the two-thirds rule as an engine for defeating Van Buren, it is also true that it was even then the ordinary usage of democratic national conventions.

The statement we are about to make will strike many people as strange, but it is nevertheless strictly accurate—namely, that in the whole history of democratic national conventions, from first to last, there has never been a single ballot for candidates except under the two-thirds rule. We make this broad statement after a fresh examination of the records, and certify that it is true without exception. The ordinary popular impression is that the two-thirds rule was invented by the South in 1844 for the purpose of killing off Mr. Van Buren. Among a more intelligent class the impression is that, although the rule was of earlier origin, it had fallen into disuse, and was revived for the same purpose for which most people think it was invented. There is a color of truth in this, because it is correct to say as a mere naked fact that the Convention of 1840 did not adopt the two-thirds rule. But why? For the very sufficient reason that no ballots were taken in the Convention of that year, and there was, consequently, no place for a rule regulating the result of ballots. In 1840 Mr. Van Buren was the unanimous choice of the party for re-election. Having no competitors there was no need of a ballot; he was nominated by a resolution which was offered in the Convention and unanimously adopted. Another resolution was at the same time offered and adopted declaring that the Convention would make no nomination for Vice President, but "leave the decision to their democratic fellow citizens in the several States, trusting that before the election shall take place their opinions shall become so concentrated as to secure the choice of a Vice President by the electoral colleges." The state of the case was that while the democratic party in all the States had nominated Mr. Van Buren for President, there were so many nominations for the second place that the Convention thought it inexpedient to alienate any of the supporters of Van Buren by making a selection from among so many jealous rivals. For the reason that no ballot was taken, or meant to be taken, there was no rule regulating the result of ballots—neither the two-thirds rule, nor the majority rule, nor any rule whatever. It is therefore strictly and incontestably true that no ballot was ever taken in any democratic national convention except under the two-thirds rule. In all national conventions of the party previous to 1840, and in all conventions subsequent to 1840, the two-thirds rule has been in force, and no rule of any kind was adopted in that year because there was no balloting for candidates. This uniform usage of the party since it began to hold national conventions in 1831 is not likely to be broken at St. Louis in favor of any candidate.

Usage apart, there is a great deal to be said against the rule and some things in its favor. It was very ably discussed in the Convention of 1844 in a long and impassioned debate, the weight of argument being against the rule but the preponderance of votes in its favor. It was denounced by Mr. Van Buren's friends as undemocratic, as enabling the minority to defeat the choice of the majority, and as subversive of the only reasonable principle on which a body of assembled men can transact business together. On the other side the speakers made a great flourish about the established usages of the party, and appealed more to the prejudices than the reason of the Convention. The only real argument for the rule in that inflammatory debate was founded on a recognition of the majority principle. It was asserted that without some such precaution a minority of the party might select its candidates and thrust them on the acceptance of the majority. The States where the party has no strength have just as many votes in the Convention as if they could aid the election, and without the two-thirds rule the representatives of a minority of the party might choose the candidates. If each State was represented in the Convention in proportion to its party strength, and the delegates voted per capita, without any unit rule to conscript the minority of particular delegations, the two-thirds rule would have no defence beyond mere usage; but so long as the unit rule is permitted, and the delegates are not apportioned according to the number of democratic voters in the States sending them, there is a great deal of force in the argument that the two-thirds rule is necessary to prevent a minority of the party from selecting its candidates.

The Extradition Question.

"A Fenian" correspondent in the HERALD of yesterday thinks that General Grant should make the course of the English government on the Extradition Treaty an act of war, and should send for O'Donovan Rossa to counsel him as to the best way of fighting England. When we last heard of O'Donovan Rossa he was lecturing to the Californians and striving to raise a "skirmishing fund" from the chambermaids. This is much more practical work than fighting England. The extradition question is most important to our country, as well as to England. Extradition between civilized countries is one of the strongest bonds of society and order. No question is more easily determined. If an American murderer escapes to England we want him home to be hanged. If we have an English murderer we are only too anxious to have him go home. Neither of the nations wishes to violate the right of asylum. There is no civilized country that would think of asking for the return of a political prisoner upon another charge. If, for instance, we had asked the extradition of Jefferson Davis on some technical charge of crime, and had tried him for treason, it would have been an outrage, an act of perfidy, that would have dishonored us in every nation. Such a thing was never possible, certainly, between two countries like England and America.

The Extradition Treaty falls through the over-sensitiveness of Mr. Cross, the English Home Secretary. It was Mr. Cross who became alarmed lest the Americans might try Lawrence for an offence other than that for which he was extradited. And although the American government did not do so—although the President expressly forbade any such trial, in deference to the English sensitiveness on the subject—Mr. Cross, in the case of Winslow, refused to issue his warrant until the American government gave a guarantee which was not required by the treaty. Of course no self-respecting government could do this, and the treaty fell.

The English are right in their resolution to protect the sanctity of asylum. No one will censure a free nation for loyalty to its flag and the hospitalities of the flag. But we do not see that the right of asylum between countries like England and America needs a treaty for its protection. It is a part of the common law of civilization. For the English to assume that we intended any violation of it was a grave error and a want of statesmanship on the part of Mr. Cross and Lord Derby. Mr. Fish is right in his refusal to amend a treaty under a menace, and especially in resisting the pretensions of Great Britain to make a solemn treaty to-day and to annul it to-morrow by an act of Parliament. So there is right and wrong on both sides, and especially on the side of America. The true way is for Mr. Fish and Sir Edward Thornton to sit down after a good dinner, talk the whole subject over from the beginning, and arrange a treaty that will satisfy every one but the thieves and murderers, who rejoice in the destruction of extradition. As to O'Donovan Rossa, his services may be declined with thanks. The "skirmishing fund" will keep him busy.

THE ANTI-CHINESE PARTY on the Pacific slope will doubtless redouble their efforts to stay the tide of cheap labor from the "Flowery land" when they learn that Wah Lung, a blanchisseur, residing in East Broadway, New York, has clubbed two Bowery roughs who insulted him at his washtub. The spirit of resistance aroused in Wah Lung is reprehensible enough without his daring to use a club for the redressal of his wrongs. That instrument of authority and discipline is properly monopolized by "the finest police in the world" in their skull fracturing exercise among women and children of this city, and we hope Mr. Wah Lung will be content with his victory and not aspire to a position on the force.

The Battle in the Big Horn Country.

The first regular battle between the United States forces and the hostile Sioux has resulted in what looks very like a defeat of the soldiers. The graphic despatch from the HERALD correspondent accompanying the expedition, and who witnessed the fight, will be found elsewhere. From it we learn that after a rapid march from his supply camp on Goose Creek General Crook, with one thousand three hundred mounted men and two hundred and fifty friendly Indians, came upon a force of Sioux warriors two thousand five hundred strong, under the command of Sitting Bull, near the head waters of Rosebud Creek, a tributary of the Yellowstone River. The attack was begun by the Sioux, who rolled back the Indian scouts on the main body. We judge that the friendly Crows and Snakes precipitated the fight before the troops could take position, in their haste to attack their traditional foes, the Sioux. The latter, who appear to have acted bravely, and to have been superbly handled, soon repulsed this Indian rush, and then took up commanding positions on the lower ridges above Rosebud Creek, from which they were dislodged only at great exposure to the troops, and retreated only to take up better positions on the higher ridges. In thus driving the Indians the troops had become dangerously separated and in danger of having their flanks turned, necessitating a reconcentration in face of a galling fire. The strenuous effort made by the Sioux to prevent this junction of the separated forces shows that their leader thoroughly understands the art of mountain warfare; and, although his warriors were finally dislodged from their highest points, the absence of pursuit, and the fact that his prompt attack on the column saved the great Sioux village, proclaim him the victor. That he was able to cope successfully with such a force of regular troops backed by Indian allies and to march off free to choose his next battle ground marks out Sitting Bull as a formidable foe. There is no necessity to lay blame at present upon General Crook, whose decision not to pursue the Sioux into a dangerous country was probably the best under the circumstances. Whether he blundered in the fight we do not presume to say until he has been heard from at length.

While Crook's forces have been practically brought to a standstill for three weeks at least, he having returned to his headquarters on Goose Creek, and while Sitting Bull is free to move his village off where it may take two months to find him, we must revert to the other two bodies of troops moving against him under General Gibbons and General Terry. It has been reported that Gibbons was checked in his attempt to cross the Yellowstone by probably a detachment of the same band that stopped Crook. General Terry at last accounts was in a quandary on the Little Missouri River, whither he went to seek Sitting Bull, and although he may have effected a junction or established communication with Gibbons it seems extremely doubtful that he even now knows in what direction to seek the Sioux. The best fortune we can hope for is that Terry shall find Sitting Bull and prevent his running East, so that by the time Crook is ready to advance there may be a chance of co-operating with him. The war now looks as though it would be protracted, bloody and very costly. Ten killed and twenty wounded on our side against thirteen Sioux scalps is not an encouraging beginning.

The Scandinavian Prince.

The second son of King Oscar of Sweden has arrived in Philadelphia. Three years ago the King, in an interview with a correspondent of the HERALD, expressed his warmest interest in the Centennial Exhibition, and, regretting he could not visit it himself, promised to send his son. This Prince is the second son of His Majesty and is in his seventeenth year. Like his father his profession will be the navy. The visit of this young Prince is an event that should not be passed without notice. The ruler of Sweden and Norway has always been a warm friend of our country. No foreign ruler has shown a deeper interest in our Exhibition than King Oscar. The display from his kingdom is one of the most attractive in the main building. Moreover, we owe to Sweden and Norway some of our best citizens. Wherever throughout the West the question of emigration is discussed the universal opinion is that no settlers are so desirable as the Swede and Norwegian. They fall into the duties of citizenship readily and do credit to the country of their adoption. Any honor we pay to the son of King Oscar is a tribute to the unbroken friendship which has always existed between Sweden and the United States, to the high rank of the King as a man and a sovereign, and to our Scandinavian fellow citizens, who will rejoice in the coming of one who may be said to be the representative of their Fatherland. We honored the Prince of Wales and the Grand Duke Alexis with unusual ceremony. We were anxious to do the same with Dom Pedro, had he not waived aside our courtesies. Sweden is as close to us as Russia, England and Brazil, and now that a Prince of Sweden is our guest let us hasten to honor him, and through him the intelligent, brave and high-minded people he represents.

OUR INTERVIEWS with delegates to the St. Louis Convention from the Northwest are remarkable as showing the hard money sentiment in Wisconsin, Iowa and other States which were supposed to sympathize with the Allen heresy. In Wisconsin, for instance, Tilden is strong because his views on the currency are safe. This is an element in the canvass that was scarcely counted upon in that section, and if it is to be taken as a test of the action of the Convention the financial plank will be after the pattern framed by the old-fashioned democracy.

WILL BLAINE GO INTO THE SENATE?—We are inclined to think that Mr. Blaine will accept the appointment of the Governor of Maine and go into the Senate. Many points would be gained by this. It would give Mr. Blaine a less active field of labor. It would enable him to lie in wait for Morton and Conkling, and worry them for defeating him at Cincinnati. It would lead to his election by the Legislature for the unexpired term. It would satisfy the republican party throughout the country, who think Blaine is a kind of martyr who has been in a political Andersonville and has scarcely escaped. It would also put an end to the investigations. Mr. Blaine may be summoned at any time to appear before the bar of the House for gross contempt of its authority in tampering with a witness and taking evidence from his possession, and there is no knowing what the House might do—expel him, perhaps. Then these investigations and letters, and Heaven knows what, and ill health to crown all! By all means let Mr. Blaine go into the Senate as the successor of Mr. Morrill. It will solve a dozen political problems.

The Sewing Machine Companies and the Seamstresses.

The invention of the sewing machine has not been an unmixed blessing to those who live by the needle. An engine driver is not a more enviable person than the driver of an old-time stage coach. The machine sews at a rate that fingers cannot compete with. It has brought needlework within the things requiring capital. It has made the possession of a sewing machine a necessity to all seamstresses. The tools that could be had three for a cent have been raised into an article costing sixty-five to seventy dollars, or representing the entire wages of from eight to eighteen weeks. The struggles necessary on the part of a poor girl or woman to pay this extortionate sum for an article not costing the manufacturers more than one-fourth the amount can only be faintly depicted in words. No description would do justice to the pinching process by which week after week, in the face of a hundred needs, the mite is put by to pay the instalment on the machine which the glozing agent sold her on such "easy terms." So easy indeed are the terms that if she by sickness or loss of work fails in a payment he will have the company's men, armed with a replevin, come and carry off the machine, and refuse to return her a cent of what she has paid, even though, like Bridget Barry, she has paid fifteen dollars more than the cash selling price. Often and often this has happened without a word of complaint from the poor, starving creatures, who think that there is no redress for them when a rich company sets its lawyer to work at their cases. Surely they think the rich company, if it has no more heart than a stone, would not go outside the law. They have paid all they could, and in some way—which, to be sure, they cannot understand the justice of—they are to lose what they have paid. Ah! they do not know how the rich company has counted on their poverty and their ignorance. Well, as there came a man called Alexander, who settled the Gordian knot by cutting it with the edge of the sword, there came, in a moment of despairing madness, a woman named Bridget Barry, who settled the sewing machine demon with the first paving stone that came to her hand. The crash of the plate glass that followed the flight of that paving stone has made known her wrongs and those of her sisters in suffering to the world.

Now, what the exposure of her sad case teaches is this, that the poor women who have entered into these contracts should not submit to having every penny they have paid withheld from them in case, by stress of circumstances, they should be unable to complete their payments. The poor women should not sign contracts that place them absolutely at the mercy of the sewing machine cormorants, whose manners are pleasant until the payments cease. It should not be difficult to find charitable and well-informed persons to look over these contracts before they are signed. But there is another point to which Bridget Barry's case calls attention—namely, the huge privileges enjoyed by the monopoly through Congress, which, by extending patent rights, has enabled the manufacturers to prey on the poor. The inventors have been long ago amply rewarded, and no application for the extension of a sewing machine patent should be entertained. Congress has already refused to extend some important patent, and this practice should be rigidly followed in all future cases. It is time that this business was limited to the profits which are recognized as fair in every other business.

EUPHONY IN THE CANVASS.—Our proposition to subscribe to a fund of a million dollars, to be given to the poet who would redeem the republican canvass from the mistake the Convention made, in a musical sense, of nominating two men like Hayes and Wheeler, by writing a patriotic ballad that would arouse the country, has excited the poets. T. M. D. sends us the following:—

Hurrah! for Hayes as leader,
Well provided with a Wheeler;
And coaching now is quite the rage,
The Republic's Centennial stage
Will safely reach the White House
From Ohio's granite State House,
And the victory will be won
By the Union's favorite son.

This will do for a beginning, but at the same time it lacks many elements of poetry and song. It would be hard to adapt a melody to this, and some of the rhymes are bad. "Leader" can never rhyme to "Wheeler," not even in a campaign song. T. M. D. will have to try again before he earns the million dollars.

THE ENGLISH ARCTIC EXPEDITION has had a mild winter in the icy northern circumpolar regions, according to recent advices from North Greenland. Although no news has yet been received from Captain Nares, who commands the expedition, there is reason to hope that it has made satisfactory progress toward the Pole, and, after the mild winter, is now moving onward to the mysterious goal.

OUR YACHTING MEN were treated to a genuine surprise during yesterday's regatta in the sailing qualities developed by the nautical "What Is It?" from Providence, which showed some of our crack yachts the way over the course. A spirited account of the race is given in to-day's HERALD, which is a perfect pen picture of the contest from start to finish.

BROTHERS IN POLITICS.—Among the earliest arrivals at St. Louis, in the interest of Governor Tilden, was his brother, Henry A. Tilden. Candidates for the Presidency should neither have brothers nor brothers-in-law.

The Appropriation Bills.

There is a great deal of buncombe in this deadlock between the Senate and the House on the appropriation bills. The pretext of the House to govern the country by means of the appropriation bills is untenable. Once concede that, and there will be no use of a Senate or a President. The argument that the Senate is resolved upon no course that will not admit of corruption is unfair and untrue. The Senate is quite as honest a body as the House, and the republicans who control it know as well as the democrats who control the House the advantage of economy as a cry in the canvass.

The trouble about this reform question, this cutting down of expenses, is that the republicans and the democrats alike seek political and not national ends. This is not the way to reform any government. We need so much money to carry on the government, so much for the different branches of the service. We need a small army, enough to picket our frontiers and to keep the skeleton of a future organization if needed. We should have a large staff, engineer and ordnance corps, because in the event of war the efficiency of the volunteers will depend largely upon the manner in which they are organized. The artillery, infantry and cavalry might be reduced—the infantry especially. There is little use for a marine corps. As to the Marine Band, however, that should be protected by an amendment to the constitution. The navy should be reduced. But we should have the most perfect torpedo system that science and money can obtain. Upon our torpedoes and the extraordinary progress science has made in the adaptability of electricity to explosive substances we must depend for the defence of our coasts. When our coasts are secure the country is secure. We have no missions on the high seas, no empire to extend over coral reefs and African jungles. Canada and Mexico are ripening pears. They will be ready to fall into our pouch as soon as we are ready to hold it out. As to the Indians, they should be transferred to the War Department. We spend money enough every year to keep every Indian in the Fifth Avenue Hotel. That fountain of corruption should be sealed. As to the foreign service, almost any change would be an advantage. One or two good, level-headed ministers, one in London and the other on the Continent, in some central point like Geneva, are all we need. Then we could have consuls or consular agents at the other capitals to transact any business we may assign to them. We have no such necessity for embassies as our friends in other nations over the sea. As to our home civil service, we do not see how it can be benefited. We pay poor salaries all around, and as a consequence are poorly served. The only reform we would suggest in that direction is an increase in the pay of the smaller officials and civil service. Strike out the whole business of patronage. Pay a clerk what he is worth, keep him steadily at work, and as long as he behaves himself and is really needed keep him employed. This would be a reform worth paying some money to attain.

Moreover, it is idle for the majority of the House to talk about economy when we see it passing a measure so iniquitous as the bill for the equalization of bounties. This bill proposes to pay about a hundred millions of dollars over to claim agents and brokers who have bought up claims for a song. Those claims never rested upon a solid foundation. They were a fraud at the outset. The House, in passing them, has approved of the fraud. Now, if Mr. Randall and some of the reformers will induce the Senate to defeat this most iniquitous measure they will save the Treasury much more money than can possibly be squeezed out of the appropriation bills.

OTTOMAN ATROCITIES IN BULGARIA—GENERAL INCENDIARISM AND INDISCRIMINATE SLAUGHTER—THE SERVIAN MILITIA TO BE MOBILIZED.

LONDON, June 23, 1876.

The Daily News this morning publishes a letter from its Constantinople correspondent, dated June 16, giving details of atrocities committed in Bulgaria during the insurrection, and which still continue, by the Bashi-Bazouks (Turkish irregular troops).

FIRE AND RUIN.

The writer says all movable property has been plundered, houses and villages burned, and old men, women and children indiscriminately slaughtered. It is estimated that the provinces which heretofore yielded to the government an annual revenue of $4,000,000 will not pay one-quarter of that sum this year or for years to come.

FOREIGN INTERFERENCE.

These cruelties have made a great impression at Constantinople. The English Ambassador has intervened with the government to put an end to them.

THE SERVIAN ARMY TO TAKE POSITIONS IN THE FIELD.

A special despatch from Vienna, published in the second edition of the Times to-day, says that, according to intelligence received from Belgrade, an order for the mobilization of the first contingent of the Servian militia has been issued. Each brigade is to assemble in its station to-morrow.

Next week an order will be issued for the mobilization of the second contingent. At the end of that week the army is to take its strategical positions on the frontier.

At the same time Prince Milan is to issue a manifesto to the people and proceed to the army.

WHAT DOES IT MEAN?

As an intention to attack Turkey is still disclaimed, these measures, if carried into effect, may be meant as a demonstration and pressure to promote the diplomatic success of M. Ristic, the Servian Minister.

"Ibrahim Pasha has been placed under arrest. There are various rumors that he is implicated in Russian intrigues, and that he assisted Abdul-Aziz in disposing of his treasure.

"The censorship of the press is extremely severe. Three Turkish and three French journals are now suspended. The government is fast becoming unpopular and will speedily fall if it does not abandon its undecided attitude."

PRINCE MILAN OF SERVIA IN A DANGEROUS POSITION.

A Berlin despatch to the Morning Post reports that Prince Milan of Servia is in serious difficulty. The influence of Prince Karageorgevich, a pretender to the throne, is being used to influence the popular sentiment, which already is decidedly in favor of war with Turkey. Karageorgevich's popularity is reported to be increasing, and it is said the Servian government apprehends disturbances among the people.

STOCKHOLDERS' MEETING IN LONDON—SIR EDWARD WATKIN'S NEW PLAN OF BONDS REDEMPTION.

LONDON, June 23, 1876.

At a meeting of the Erie Railway stockholders today Sir Edward Watkin submitted the following plan:—

That without reducing the rate of interest, beginning next September, they should fund for a period of four and a half years the alternate coupons of the first bonds, paying alternate coupons in gold, and that they should fund of the second bonds nine half yearly coupons in a lump.

Sir Edward suggested that there should be power in 1880 to redeem the second bonds at £80.

The meeting adopted the scheme after a complimentary allusion to Messrs. Jewett, Fleming and Miller.

DETAILS OF SIR EDWARD WATKIN'S EXPLANATION.

LONDON, June 24, 1876.

Sir Edward Watkin explained that, under the scheme submitted to the meeting yesterday, the holders of $1,000 nominal of the second bonds would receive immediately $300 in new bonds, which would pay five per cent interest, commencing June 1, 1877. After 1880 the interest on the second bonds which were not redeemed would be reduced from seven to six per cent. Preference and ordinary shareholders were to be assessed respectively three and six per cent.

It was decided that two or three leading Americans should be invited to co-operate and support Jewett.

BRAVERY OF THE FRIENDLY INDIANS.

GENERAL CROOK'S CAMP, BIG HORN EXPEDITION, GOOSE CREEK, June 19, 1876, Via FORT FETTERMAN, June 23, 1876.

An important battle was fought day before yesterday at the head waters of Rosebud Creek, about fifty miles north, between the hostile Sioux, numbering 2,500, under Sitting Bull of the North and the column under command of Brigadier General George Crook, composed of 1,300 mounted soldiers. The fight lasted five hours, and resulted in the discomfiture of the savages, although not before they had inflicted on the troops a loss of ten killed and twenty wounded. On their own side they sacrificed by the bold attack which they made about one hundred warriors and an equal number of ponies, but thereby saved for the time being their village, which, according to the guide, lay at a distance of only six miles from the battle field.

THE MARCH.

The active column of the expedition left the camp for supplies established on this stream early on the morning of June 16, General Crook at its head, intending to penetrate northward to the grand Sioux village, with the hope of reaching it and learning its designs before being obliged to fight. His plan was to repeat the achievement of last winter with more complete success. The five companies of infantry, with a party of twenty civilians, were mounted on mules borrowed from the pack train, and only four days' rations and one blanket were allowed each man as luggage. No means of transportation were taken, except riding horses and mules, and two sumpter mules to carry hospital necessities and pioneer tools. A force so well equipped for rapid and effective service never before moved against the Sioux. Two hundred and fifty Snakes and Crows marched as scouts, provided with government arms, led by Chiefs Louisante Cosgrove, Old Crow, Medicine Crow and Good Heart. On the day before yesterday a march of thirty-five miles was made, when the force bivouacked at the head waters of the Rosebud, between high bluffs, where it was necessary to form in a hollow square in anticipation of a night attack, as the Crows had reported fresh signs of Sioux, and the movement of the buffalo indicated they were near. There was no molestation, however, and the march was resumed in the morning at half-past five in two columns.

THE ENEMY.

But ten miles were traversed down the valley of the stream when a sudden halt was made at a wild signal of the Snakes galloping up and shouting, "Sioux! Sioux!" At the same time shots were fired rapidly beyond the low hills bordering on the stream. Other friendly Indians who had been out, on espying the enemy, dashed down into the valley, wildly gesticulating and calling to their little bands to arm and mount. The jaded ponies were exchanged for fresh ones, the Crows formed in rank and stood singing their war song and welcoming their scouts who came flying back to the accompaniment of shots fired beyond the hills as if hotly pursued. In a moment all the Snakes and Crows rushed in the direction, and war yells arose as they caught a glimpse of their ancient foes. Good Heart was pursued by two Sioux to the edge of the valley, whither he hurried to give the alarm, and there, on the summit of a hill, turning on one of them, he pulled him from his pony by the hair as he dealt the death stroke and quickly scalped him. General Crook wished first to advance the soldiers against the Sioux, whose shouts indicated they were driving the few scouts still absent from the column back to it for refuge, but the Crows could not be restrained. The Snakes and Crows charged the Sioux, and on the first onset made them rapidly recede. Then ensued a desultory fight for half an hour, the troops in the valley being delayed from rendering support by the necessity of saddling their animals. Captain Kane's infantry company was the first to advance to the crest of the ridge north of the valley and there opened fire. Seeing the Crows and Snakes pressed back by the masses of Sioux and flying before them—a high, steep ridge being peopled by them, and their fire deadly—the infantry charged directly up the narrow backbone, stopping at every crest to level a volley at them, but saw them retire only to hold against them still higher points beyond. They had taken on the stream, commanding the ravines through which the troops would probably have passed, and where they might have been slaughtered like sheep before a charge could have been made. Captain Kane held the first crest next the valley fifteen minutes. The battalion of the Second cavalry, under Captain Noyes, charged a crest further north, and when dismounted poured in two volleys. This movement was performed for the purpose of preventing the Sioux from regaining their lost ground. Captain Mills, at the head of a battalion of the Third cavalry, moved forward through Noyes' ranks and charged the next higher crest, where he dismounted, and his men, lying down, maintained a steady fire for half an hour against the crowd of Sioux skirmishers who lay partly concealed. The Crows, who had been withdrawn from the front of the troops, made another charge and again fell back. The Sioux, now become more bold, were creeping forward and getting ready to make a dash, when Mills moved up the side of the mound which protected them and again drove them back. This time their flight would have been final, but for an order received to wheel to the right and charge certain points where small groups of Sioux were harassing his flank. As he approached they gave him several heavy volleys, but broke and ran. The battalion halted in the captured bluffs, when an aide of General Crook's delivered the command to and advance directly north along the stream to the Sioux village, supposed by the guides to be only six miles distant. Captain Noyes was to follow and support him, but before moving he received counter orders, the Crows having changed their opinion about the location of the village. Captain Nickerson was sent to direct Mills to return, but did not overtake him until after he had proceeded four miles. Meanwhile Colonel Royall, in command of all the cavalry, but in immediate charge of the left of the line, composed of companies D, F, B and L of the Third cavalry, Captain Henry, battalion commander, companies C and G, under Captain Varnliet, squadron commander, and Captain Andrews' troop of the Second cavalry, had a terrible task to perform. Your correspondent was with him through the fight, and observed that he manipulated his men under the difficult and

A MAGNIFICENT POSITION

CONFLICTING ORDERS

from his superior with consummate skill, although he could not prevent unnecessary sacrifice of life without risking the penalty of disobedience. The left wing of cavalry went forward at a trot to second the advance of Captain Mills on the main ridge by going up a hollow on the left, behind successive low hills. One company after another was deployed in line as skirmishers, and fired with deadly effect upon the Sioux, who were within close range. Every point of vantage, northwest and south, seemed crowded by them. The firing was checked, however, by the cry that they were Crows, and before the mistake was recognized they had retired after a general discharge of their pieces. Those on the highest crest of the main ridge, however, where hundreds of them were massed, maintained their ground and continued a murderous fire. The cavalry on the left saw the Snakes and Crows fly before them twice as Mills' battalion disappeared on the other side after his last charge. A line of infantry was all that kept them from sweeping the whole ridge which had before been captured from them and offered no protection from the falling hail of bullets which they were pouring upon our left, where Colonel Royall was in command. A moment more and our steady advance would have gained the left wing, a position from which it would have mowed down the Sioux who were harassing it, but the order was to advance slowly, and as the centre was stationary there was a fear of going too far ahead. Meantime the line holding them in check on main the ridge aimed so accurately that a great many of the enemy slipped away and rode rapidly southward, dodging behind the rocks and mounds to reach the flank, where from the palisades a dropping fire had already begun. The soldiers were eager to charge. Had they done so their exposure would have been shortened and end in a triumphant chase. At this moment an order came from General Crook and connect with the right of the line, so as to concentrate and make a general advance. This movement was disastrous. The Sioux held all the highest ground, and from several points swept the lower ridge in our rear with a terrible enfilading fire which pressed the line of retreat. As the cavalry retreated slowly on foot and skirmishing, the Sioux made repeated charges on the flanks and were repulsed by the resolute courage of the men, who, although principally recruits, stood their ground as bravely as veterans. In forming a junction with the main command a wide hollow must be crossed, which was swept by a rain of fire from the bluffs, and the Sioux were already preparing to charge from both ends. They made every exertion to keep the command divided, and their fighting at this moment was masterly. Colonel Royall sent to General Crook to ask support, but before an infantry company took position to protect the retreat he was pressed back so that his men found themselves suddenly in the hollow, the Sioux charging upon them on two sides and a dropping fusillade cutting them down. Nine men were killed here and twenty wounded. I crossed over to the hill occupied by the infantry a moment before and just escaped an onset of the savages. Captain Henry was horribly wounded in the head. The infantry, taking position behind the west incline of the ridge, opened fire. At this moment Captain Handall, seeing the peril of the cavalry, set the Crows and Snakes at full speed into the hollow and the latter fought the Sioux nobly. One of them, after Captain Henry had fallen, stood and protected him until the soldiers made a dash and bore him off. Sergeant Von Moll separated in the retreat from his company, and, surrounded by Sioux, was rescued by Old Crow, single handed. As soon as the junction of the line was effected the Sioux began to yield, and the infantry, under Majors Burrows and Burt, drove them at last from the high cone which they had held so long. The Snakes caused their final flight and pursued a party of four Sioux two miles, killed them all and took their scalps. At one o'clock the firing had ceased, and the whole command followed in pursuit; but after moving three miles forward the country appeared so dangerous that General Crook determined to fall back to the point where the battle began.

THE CROWS DISSATISFIED.

Meanwhile the Crows were counselling on a bluff about the circumstances of the fight, and expressing the belief that the soldiers had not promptly supported their first advance against the Sioux (which was true), and had determined to return home. The ammunition, only 100 rounds to the man, was half exhausted, and General Cook concluded to return to the camp and make another advance after giving rest to the troops, meanwhile hoping to conciliate the discontented Crows. In this he did not succeed. They left last evening for their village, which they fear the Sioux have visited during their absence. The Snakes still remain, but their steadfastness cannot be relied on.

DETAILS OF THE FIGHT.

Some of the minor incidents of the fight were most horrible. A small squad of cavalrymen, acting as rear guard on the march, were ordered to hold a point on the left. The Sioux surrounded them and shot them in the face, only two escaping.

Private Richard Bennett's body was disembowelled by the savages and the hands and feet cut off.

The troops behaved gallantly in rescuing their dead and wounded.

A corporal of T company, Third cavalry, made a gallant charge to rescue a comrade from the scalping knife. The Sioux only obtained one scalp, while the friendly Indians captured thirteen of the Sioux who dragged many of their dead from the field behind their ponies.

THE WITHDRAWAL.

The Sioux were too much demoralized to trouble the column while withdrawing. A bivouac was made the night after the battle on the field. It is supposed that the village of the Sioux was moved during the fight. The supply train will be sent to Fetterman, and will return in about twenty days, after which the new scouts will take their place, with five additional companies of infantry.

The wounded were transported to this camp on mule litters, and all are doing well.

THE OFFICIAL REPORT OF THE BATTLE.

CHICAGO, June 23, 1876.

A despatch was received by General Sheridan today, from General Crook, dated Camp on the South of Tongue River, Wyoming, June 19, officially confirming the press despatch concerning the fight with Indians.

THE KILLED AND WOUNDED.

General Crook reports nine white men killed and fifteen wounded in the Third cavalry, two wounded in the Second cavalry, three wounded in the Fourth infantry and Captain Henry, of the Third cavalry, severely wounded in the face. The loss of the Indians cannot be estimated, but thirteen dead bodies were left on the field and many had been removed.

REINFORCEMENTS ORDERED UP.

OMAHA, June 23, 1876.

General Crook has ordered five additional companies of infantry and one of cavalry to report to his headquarters, in the field, at once.

ANOTHER ACCOUNT OF THE BATTLE.

CHEYENNE, W. T., June 23, 1876.

As intimated in the last despatch, Crook's command left camp on the morning of the 16th inst. with four days' rations, and struck across to the Rosebud, a branch of the Yellowstone, in Montana. Following down this creek next morning about five miles, the Snake and Crow scouts brought word from the front that the Sioux were in force at the hills, and by half past eight o'clock the command was in position and was inaugurated along the bluffs to the north of the creek. The enemy, who had begun the attack, showing thereby their confidence in their ability to whip the command, retired as the soldiers and allies advanced. The Sioux, all well mounted and well armed, swarmed in numbers at times and were prodigal in the use of ammunition. The fight lasted four hours, when the enemy retired out of sight at every point.

THE CASUALTIES

are as folows:—

Third Cavalry—Company B, Sergeant Marshall and private Roe killed.

Privates Broderson and Featherby, wounded.

Company I.—Privates Allen and Flynn, killed.

Sergeant Enoch, Corporal Carts, Privates Smith, Stewart, O'Brien, Lossey and Boskey wounded.

Company L.—Sergeant Newkirker, Privates Bennett, Potts, Connors and Mitchell killed.

Sergeants Cook, Edwards, Snow and Cramer wounded.

Second Cavalry.—Captain Henry.

Company D.—Sergeant O'Donnell, wounded.

Company B.—Private Steiner, wounded.

The latter are all likely to recover.

One Snake scout was killed and three wounded, and four Crows were wounded.

THE ENEMY'S LOSS.

The dead bodies of thirteen Sioux were found on the field, and it is certain a number more were killed, with the usual proportion of wounded. Several of the Sioux' ponies were killed, and General Crook's horse was shot under him.

THE LOCATION.

The fight occurred fifty miles from the wagon and pack train, and owing to the want of rations and that the wounded might be cared for it was necessary to return thither.

CONDUCT OF THE TROOPS.

The officers and soldiers all displayed great gallantry, the nature of the ground making the infantry advantageous. General Crook has ordered five companies to join him at once, the cavalry meanwhile continuing operations on the plains and hills, should no definite information of villages be obtained. There is one month's supply of provisions in the camp. The Crows have returned to their homes. The Snakes still remain. The rich game country of the Big Horn affords an ample commissary department for the Sioux.

DOM PEDRO.

CONVERSAZIONES OF THE REPRESENTATIVES OF THE GOVERNMENTS OF THE WORLD—A VISIT TO THE UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT BUILDING.

PHILADELPHIA, June 23, 1876.

The Emperor of Brazil has issued invitations to a number of gentlemen representing the governments of the world at the Exhibition to attend conversaziones upon the subject of the great display. The first of these gatherings occurred on Thursday evening at the rooms of His Majesty at the Centennial, and was attended by a select company of thirty-five gentlemen, of whom only four were Americans. The evening was pleasantly spent in informal conversations upon the general features of the Exhibition. Four of these entertainments have been appointed, of which the second takes place to-morrow evening.

His Brazilian Majesty Dom Pedro left the Continental at seven o'clock this morning, accompanied by the Viscount de Bom Retiro, Vice Minister of Public Instruction of Brazil, and Señor Borges, Brazilian Minister to the United States, proceeded to the Academy of Natural Sciences, where he arrived fifteen minutes later. Here the Emperor was received and entertained by the following named officers or members of the institution:—Professors Leidy, Halderman, Koening, of the University of Pennsylvania; Mr. Cope, Paleontologist of the United States Geological Survey; Dr. LeCompte, ex-President of the American Society for the Advancement of Science; Dr. Pickering and Messrs. Redfield, Smith and Nolan. His Majesty was accompanied by these gentlemen in turn through the departments of the Academy and manifested special interest in the library and microscopical department. As a souvenir of his visit, presentations were made to him of copies of recent works on the vertebrate fauna of Dakotah and Nebraska and photographic views of the interior and exterior of the building. After spending one hour and three-quarters in the institution, the visitors left for the Exhibition.

At the grounds the Emperor devoted the entire four hours of his visit to a leisurely inspection of the United States government building. The geological, ethnological and educational sections were severally visited and many of the objects examined in detail with great care, especially the photographs of the geological surveys, which His Majesty inspected very critically. The Patent Office, its publications and model of the cotton gin, and next the Agricultural Bureau, with its grains, fruits, native woods and fishes were the objects of the Imperial scrutiny. The refrigerators for the preservation of fresh fish, the models of fishing vessels and plastic casts of fishes were given special attention, as also the aboriginal house made by the natives of Alaska, which occupies a place in the rear of the Government Building. The presence of His Majesty was unknown to the officers of the different departments until some time after his arrival, as he was entirely unaccompanied, but upon being recognized provision was instantly made whereby he was escorted through each section by the chiefs of each respectively—viz., General Eaton, of the educational; Mr. Knight, of the Patent Office; Professor Baird, of the zoological, and Professor Blake, of the mineral. In the ordnance laboratory the Emperor witnessed the operation of the chonograph in measuring the velocity of the flight of missiles, and subsequently was attended through the ordnance and hospital section by Lieutenant Metcalfe, and through the Navy Department exhibition by Lieutenant Davenport.

YACHTING.

The Centennial Regatta for Yachts of Fifteen Tons and Under.

A Mysterious Stranger That Whipped the Fleet.

THE LIFE RAFT AMARYLLIS PROTESTED

The Reveille, Susie S., Amaryllis and Victoria the Winners.

The second regatta of the series given under the auspices of the Centennial Committee was sailed yesterday afternoon. It was open only to yachts of fifteen tons (old New York club measurement) and under. The regatta was sailed under the direction of a sub-committee, comprising Messrs. John M. Sawyer, Brooklyn Yacht Club; O. E. Cromwell and M. R. Schuyler, Seawanhaba Yacht Club; and Sidney W. Knowles, Atlantic Yacht Club. The breeze during the morning was very light, but it gradually gathered strength and at noon there was enough to make the light little craft move along quite handsomely under their racing canvas. The rules of the regatta classified the yachts as follows:—

First class—All cabin sloops. Second class—All open yachts of twenty-five feet mean length. Third class—All yachts of twenty-five feet mean length and under. Fourth class—All open yachts carrying pleasure or working sails.

Distinguishing numbers were placed on the sails of each yacht participating in the race.

THE COURSE AND PRIZES.

The course was from a stakeboat off the New York Yacht Club house to and around a stakeboat off Coney Island; thence to and around a stakeboat off Bay Ridge; thence to and around a stakeboat off Robbins' Reef; thence returning to the home stakeboat, and thence over the same course again, keeping all stakeboats on the port hand, no passing and rounding them. The prizes offered were a medal and diploma of the International Exhibition of 1876 for the winner in each class, as well as a silver prize offered by the Centennial Regatta Committee.

THE STARTING SIGNALS.

"First gun, prepare to start; second gun, for first and fourth classes to start, and third gun for second and third classes to start." These guns were fired at intervals of five minutes, and any yacht passing the line after the expiration of ten minutes from gun-fire to start her class was timed as though she had passed ten minutes after such gun-fire.

By noon the flats in front of the New York Yacht Club House presented a very lively appearance, as at least forty small boats were cruising around, the majority of which had numbers on their sails informing the public that they were to participate in the regatta. They all carried crews of from seven to twelve men, and some were attired in shirts and caps of bright colors, giving a rather picturesque appearance to the scene.

THE START.

At 12h. 12m. 20s. the preparatory gun was fired on board the yacht Reckless, which was anchored off the club house, having been lent by Rear Commodore Kane as a stakeboat. The little yachts now began to gather up to windward of the line, and at 12h. 17m. 40s the second gun was fired, giving the first and fourth classes the starting signal. The yachts crossed the line as follows:—

There was quite a pleasant westerly breeze at the start and the tide was in the first quarter of the ebb. They all ran across with slack sheets and their booms to port, and were soon bunched up together, making it rather hard to pick them out. Those that kept well out in the stream had the best of it, as the Journeyman, Almira, Amaryllis, Tough, Cricket and Leroy got becalmed under Fort Wadsworth and lost a few minutes, while the others were making the best of their way to Coney Island Point. The Henry Ward Beecher passed the Cynthia in the Narrows and took the lead of the fleet. The Pluck and Luck was doing very well, having passed the Reveille, Favorita, Maud, Rebecca, Fidget and several others and followed after the Cynthia a short distance ahead of the Susie S. The Amaryllis, the life raft from Providence, was not doing very well so far, as the breeze was very light, but those that had seen her move the day before were confident of the dance she would lead them if the breeze freshened. The fleet rounded the stakeboat at Coney Island as follows:—

CONEY ISLAND—FIRST TURN.

They were then all hauled in the wind, reaching back into the Narrows. The Inspector was evidently not being handled by a racing crew, as she had reefed her mainsail and put a bow in her jib. All the yachts passed between Fort Lafayette and the mainland, with the exception of the Pluck and Luck. The Susie S. kept the weather berth of the fleet, and, as the wind headed them off at the Narrows, came out best, as she had not to tack. The Amaryllis got into trouble off Fort Hamilton dock, as she had to tack, and being slow in stays, with the tide against her, she lost five minutes before she got started again. At 1h. 45m., however, she caught a little puff that sent her flying by about a dozen and brought her up next to the H. H. Holmes. The yachts turned the stakeboat off Bay Ridge as follows:—

BAY RIDGE—FIRST TURN.

	H.	M.	S.		H.	M.	S.
Susie S	1	43	00	Victoria	1	50	00

H. W. Beecher	1	46	38	Amaryllis	1	53	30

The yachts now headed for Robbin's Reef, with the Susie S. leading. At 1h. 53m. the Susie S. had to bear away in order to get out of the way of a tow that was going out and allowed the Cynthia to close up a little. The Amaryllis passed the Holmes and the Cricket and closed up after the Greenpoint. The leading yachts rounded the stakeboat at Robin's Reef as follows:—

ROBIN'S REEF—FIRST TURN.

	H.	M.	S.		H.	M.	S.

H. W. Beecher	2	02	00	Leroy	2	10	00
Victoria	2	05	00

The Susie S., after rounding, slacked off sheet and went flying along toward the home stakeboat, followed by the Cynthia and Pluck and Luck. The Amaryllis got a puff at 2h. 17m., off the Quarantine landing, and went through the lee of the Greenpoint after several ineffectual attempts to weather her. The docks along the Staten Island shore were now crowded with people, and it was evident that the greatest interest was evinced in the race. The yachts passed the home stakeboat in the first round as follows:—

HOME STAKE—FIRST ROUND.

	H.	M.	S.		H.	M.	S.
Susie S	2	13	45	Journeyman	2	25	45

After passing the club house the yachts skipped along toward Coney Island, and presently a lively puff caught the cigar boat and she went by the Victoria, H. W. Beecher and W. T. Lee as if they were standing still. It now become very plain that if the breeze kept fresh the "What Is It?" would certainly whip the fleet. The yachts turned Coney Island stakeboat as follows:—

CONEY ISLAND SECOND TURN.

	H.	M.	S.		H.	M.	S.
Susie S	2	35	30	W. T. Lee	2	40	15
Cynthia	2	38	11	H. W. Beecher	2	41	00
W. R. Brown	2	39	30	Victoria	2	43	30
Pluck and Luck	2	39	45	Greenpoint	2	44	45
Amaryllis	2	40	00

After leaving the Coney Island buoy the breeze was rather scant, and between Fort Lafayette and Fort Hamilton several of the yachts had to tack, but the Susie S. was cleverly handled and stood on without going in stays. The Catamaran, however, tacked three times, but that did not make much difference, as at 3h. 15m. she caught a puff that sent her flying to the van of the fleet. It then came a trifle strong, and her lee boat went right under water, sending the other up in the air and stopping her headway. The Susie S. then passed her, but only for a moment, as she got started again and took the lead at once. The yachts turned the Bay Ridge buoy as follows:—

BAY RIDGE—SECOND TURN.

	H.	M.	S.		H.	M.	S.
Amaryllis	3	19	00	H. W. Beecher	3	25	40
Susie S	3	19	55	Pluck and Luck	3	25	45
Cynthia	3	25	10	W. T. Lee	3	28	45
W. R. Brown	3	25	15

On the reach to Robbin's Reef the Pluck and Luck parted something, an accident that delayed her a little. The Amaryllis was rapidly leaving the fleet and turned the Robbin's Reef stakeboat at 3h. 34m. 30s., about two minutes and a half ahead of the Susie S. The rest all followed in quick succession and running out sheet came down to the finish in handsome style. They made a very pretty picture crossing the home line and luffing up after their time was taken. The following is the corrected and actual time of the yachts:—

HARVARD UNIVERSITY.

CLASS DAY AT THE UNIVERSITY—THE ORATIONS, THE POEMS AND THE DANCING—THE EXERCISES AT THE TREE—ILLUMINATIONS AT HOLWORTHY AND THE GLEE CLUB.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., June 23, 1876.

Rarely has Class Day been observed at Harvard more generally and agreeably than to-day. The weather was the choicest of the summer season, and the attendance of visitors from Boston and elsewhere was larger than ever before in the history of the University. The festivities commenced as early as 9 o'clock in the morning, and were continued until late this evening. The exercises in the chapel occupied most of the forenoon, and were opened by prayer, and followed by an oration by Theodore Chickering Williams, of Boston, in which he labored to point out the best equipments for the duties of life, such as sound judgment, the power of choosing well, of resolutely following up the choice, and that unhesitating trust in the veracity of one's own convictions by which the courage of self-reliance is distinguished from the perversity of self-will.

The poet of the occasion was Charles A. Dickinson, of Cambridge, who rehearsed in humorous verse the entrance of '76 to Harvard, the triumphs of the class since that day in baseball, hazing, and foot ball; its hard work in boating and other like matters which go to make up the history of a college class. He then turned to the future and after briefly apostrophizing the centennial year pledged the class to lives of purity and patriotism, closing by an eloquent allusion to the bright days they had spent at Harvard and the still brighter memory of them which would follow through life.

Following the poem there was an original ode, written by Frederick Stinson, of Dedham, sung with fine effect to the air of "Fair Harvard." At the conclusion of the exercise in the chapel the seniors formed the line of march in twos, led by President Eliot and Dr. Peabody, and proceeded to the east side of the library, where a space had been roped off for the graduating class, and the ivy oration was delivered by the ivy orator, John B. Olmstead, of Leroy, N. Y. He referred to the feeble growth of class ivys, enough of which had been planted to clothe the library building in living green, had their growth flourished, and alluded in a facetious tone to the record of the class of '70, the members of which he classified as reformers and loafers. The oration was full of personal and local hits, and was received from time to time with shouts of approbation. The oration being concluded, the seniors and their guests dispersed to the various buildings about the quadrangle, where the customary "spreads" were enjoyed in many a room made memorable by undergraduate associations.

At three o'clock in the afternoon festivities were begun. By this hour the throng of beautifully dressed ladies and their escorts was largely augmented and the quadrangle presented a very beautiful and animated appearance. Brown's Brigade Band, of Boston, discoursed sweet music from the stand in front of Holworthy's. The windows of all the buildings facing the quadrangle presented a pretty tableau of the laughing faces and gay spring hats of the ladies, the lower class students, to the number of several hundred, sprawled about on the green grass smoking cigarettes, envying the seniors and admiring the bevies of fair damsels passing to and fro on the walks. Shortly after three o'clock Memorial Hall was opened, and in less than ten minutes the floor was thronged with promenaders. The floors were waxed, and the Germania Band furnished some of Strauss' most enticing strains for the dancers. The galleries and chairs at the sides of the hall were filled with interested spectators—papas, mammas, aunties and wall flowers of all sorts. The dancing was enjoyed by many hundred couples, and at times the floor presented the appearance of a rather uncomfortable crush. The ladies were really finely dressed, considering the hard times one hears so much about. Blue and pink silks seemed to predominate, with muslin overdresses. Meantime, while the dancers in the hall were whirling through the mazes of the giddy waltz to the tune of "Wiener Blut;" scores of sisters, cousins, mothers and female friends were being shown the sights and escorted through the various buildings of the University.

ST. JOHN'S COLLEGE.

The large hall of St. John's College, corner of Lewis and Willoughby avenues, Brooklyn, was crowded to its fullest capacity on Thursday evening by the clergy of the diocese and the parents and friends of students to witness the sixth annual exhibition of the college. The platform on which the 150 students of the college were seated was tastefully decorated with flowers and handsomely draped with the national colors. The programme was carried out under the direction of Rev. P. M. O'Regan, D. D., the President, the Right Rev. Bishop Loughlin presiding.

The salutatory address was delivered by Mr. M. Sullivan in a manner that elicited the approval of the audience. This was followed by an address on "Home" by Mr. M. Blake, which was delivered in a very creditable manner. "True Heroism" formed the subject of an address by Mr. W. Armstrong, after which Mr. J. McGuire delivered a fine oration upon "The Life and Achievements of Daniel O'Connell," Mr. R. Connolly, in an address on the "Centennial," gave ample proof of the attention bestowed in the college to the cultivation of the sentiments of patriotism among the students.

At the close of the exercises Rev. Father O'Regan briefly explained the system by which the record of each student's proficiency was kept during the year. Premiums were then given to the following youths by Bishop Loughlin:—The gold medal of 1876, donated by Rev. Peter O'Neill, to William Armstrong; premiums of books to J. A. Glaccum, James Muldoon, J. Harrigan, E. St. John's College, he said, had flourished from the start, and he felt bound to say that the principles inculcated in it were true to religion and true to liberty, and he hoped the students would always reflect credit on their alma mater.

SCHOOL EXERCISES.

The handsome Terrace Garden Theatre was crowded to the doors yesterday afternoon by the parents and friends of the scholars of Grammar School No. 18, who were giving a reception prior to their annual vacation. The programme consisted of recitations, declamations and singing by the scholars, and addresses by the school officers and by Mr. Harrison, Assistant Superintendent of Grammar Schools, Hon. S. D. Moulton, J. W. Beekman, Esq. and others. In the recitations Masters Benjamin F. Moss and Abraham Schwartz excelled, while in singing Masters Thomas Truss and Bennet B. Cushman carried off the honors. A feature of the entertainment was the reciting of questions from Shakespeare, Byron, Pope, Addison and others by a large number of the scholars, in which the members of Miss M. Anna Cowhey's class showed the greatest proficiency. The exercises were brought to an end by the presentation by the graduating class to their teacher, Mr. James Murphy, of a solid silver pitcher and goblet of handsome design and finish. Mr. Murphy, who was taken by surprise, responded in a very feeling manner. The piano music was of a high order and was rendered by Miss Hines. A large number of prizes were distributed to the boys, the gifts of Mr. W. F. Hudson, the principal; Mr. Murphy and Miss M. Anna Cowhey. The audience seemed to be well pleased with the rendering of the excellent programme and separated with renewed faith in the efficiency of school No. 18.

A novel and pleasing entertainment was the closing reception of Grammar School No. 20, held yesterday morning at half-past ten o'clock. Under the auspices of Miss Marr, principal of the school, a number of children participating in dialogues, declamation and short sketches were enthusiastically received by a large audience. Special mention is deserved by Master Johns, for his rendition of a poem written by Miss Seixas. Quite a number of prominent East side residents attended the reception, which closed at twelve o'clock.

The exercises of the pupils of the French department of Grammar School No. 29, in Greenwich street, yesterday morning, were very interesting. They were witnessed by a large number of proud parents and pleased friends of the girls. The participants in the dialogues and semi-dramatic pieces performed their tasks with a skill that betokened much natural ability on their side, and good direction on that of Miss Butts, the principal of the department and her assistants. The recitations were cleverly rendered by the children and the choruses were sung with sweetness and precision. Certificates of good conduct and scholarship were presented to many of the pupils, and prizes were distributed among them on behalf of school officers and teachers.

Mr. William Wood, President of the Board of Education, Messrs. Fanning and Harrison, Assistant Superintendents, and Mr. John H. McIntire spoke briefly to the children, conveying much good advice and some pleasing wit to them.

The closing exercises of St John's Free School were held yesterday. The Rev. Morgan Dix, D. D., presided. Prizes were awarded to J. R. Dezeller, George Morgan and J. S. Heeny.

The annual distribution of certificates to pupils took place yesterday in the grammar department of Public School No. 4, Ryerson street, Brooklyn. The exercises were directed by the accomplished principal, Professor W. M. Jelliffe. Dr. Schapps, chairman of the Local School Committee, was among those who addressed the school. Certificates were distributed among seventy-two scholars. The programme was interesting and of a character to exhibit the talent of the boys and girls.

The annual reception of the primary department of Public School No 25, Walworth street, Brooklyn, was held yesterday afternoon. The attendance of friends of the pupils and citizens interested in the cause of education was very large. The exercises were conducted by Miss Mary Knaebel, the accomplished principal of the department. The vocal capacity of the children was attested by their fine rendition of the "Centennial Hymn," "One Hundred Years Ago," "Our Nation's Song," "The Star Spangled Banner," &c. The music was under the direction of Miss Mary D Bannon.

Among those who were present and made brief addresses upholding the school as a model for all others of the grade of instruction imparted there in the city were Mr. A. Foreman, J. L. Marcellus and N. J. Gates, of the Local Committee, and the Superintendent of Public Schools, Thomas W. Field.

The annual commencement of the primary department of Grammar School No. 42, at Allen and Hester streets, was celebrated yesterday. One thousand seven hundred pupils are on the register and the average attendance is over 1,500. Yesterday every seat in the building was occupied. Parents had vied with each other in dressing the little ones for the festival. The teachers had decorated the walls and columns of the house with national colors, flags, flowers and legends in commemoration of the centennial year. Midway in the auditorium and in the right of the centre line of columns was festooned a bullet-torn regimental flag bearing the word "War." On the left of the columns was a national flag of silk, pure and complete, bearing the word "Peace." Dr. Wiseman and Henry R. Roome, members of the Local Board, and Assistant Superintendent Jones, were on the stage as patrons of the festival. After appropriate addresses by these gentlemen the exercises, consisting of singing, recitations, piano solos and drill in the manual of arms by the little boys, were gone through with. Nearly 300 certificates for correct deportment and punctual attendance were distributed among the pupils.

THE M'CUNN ESTATE.

Queer Wrangle of Executors Over a Judge's Will.

MRS. M'CUNN'S STRANGE STORY.

The arrest and incarceration in Ludlow Street Jail yesterday of Mrs. Jane McCunn and Thomas McCunn, widow and brother of the late Judge McCunn, of this city, occasioned considerable talk in certain circles and the why and the wherefore was freely discussed. Although many stories were set afloat concerning the arrest, the true facts of the case seem to be as follows:—The Judge in his will appointed his widow, his brother and James M. Gano, who married his wife's sister, his executors. The sole management of the estate by consent of the widow was left in the hands of Mr. Gano from the time the will was admitted to probate up to last July, when the widow, in conjunction with her brother-in-law, took possession of the estate, ignoring Mr. Gano altogether. Her reason for this action was her belief that Mr. Gano was not faithful to his stewardship. Last March Mr. Gano began a suit against the widow and Thomas McCunn jointly for the appointment of a receiver of the estate, on account of the incompetency of the defendants and for the purpose of having the question decided whether he was or not a trustee of the estate as well as the other two executors. The latter contended he was not; that inasmuch as the Judge in his will had created a trust and placed them alone in charge of it for six years, and inasmuch as he was merely appointed one of the executors in a codicil to the will, they had the full and exclusive control of the estate. As co-plaintiff in the suit is one Elizabeth Patterson, who claims to be the daughter of a half brother of the Judge. She contests on the ground that the clause limiting the trusteeship of the estate to a final period is null and void, for certain specific reasons given in her complaint, and argues that if the clause is void the real estate must go to the heirs at law, and the widow is entitled to her one third only. A receiver was appointed last April by Judge Donohue. A short time after his appointment he ordered Mrs. McCunn and Thomas McCunn and Mr. Gano to turn over to him all the books and papers in their possession relating to the estate, together with an account of moneys received while they had exclusive control of the estate. Mr. Gano having no papers in his possession made a return to that effect to the receiver. The other two executors paid no attention to the order, and it is said purposely kept out of the way so that no other order could be served upon them. The final result was that the Sheriff's officers managed to get hold of them yesterday, when they were arrested on an attachment and committed to Ludlow Street Jail in default of bail, Mrs. McCunn stating that she would stay in jail forever rather than give bail for doing what she believed was right. She was also served with an attachment signed by Judge McAdam for contempt, in not appearing to answer last May a summons issued in the suit of Alexander and Samuel Clark, who had obtained an execution for nearly $2,000 for plumbing work done for the estate. The counsel for the Alexanders states that Mrs. McCunn kept out of the way ever since May 24, and it was only yesterday that the officers succeeded in reaching her. "We know the estate is good," said the counsel's chief clerk, "and we wanted Mrs. McCunn; as for Thomas, he's not worth a red and we didn't care for him. She has apparently been badly advised by somebody from time to time and has not always had good legal advice, or if she did, did not follow it." In order to learn just how matter stood so far as Mrs. McCunn was concerned, a HERALD reporter yesterday afternoon called upon her at Ludlow Street Jail and had a long talk with her in the presence of her brother-in-law, Thomas. She made the following statement, Thomas indorsing it as Gospel truth:—

THE VALIDITY OF THE WILL

WHAT MRS. M'CUNN SAYS.

Judge McCunn died on the 6th of July, 1872. He left a will in which he named as executors James Gano, who is the husband of my sister; Thomas McCunn, brother of the Judge, and Jane W. McCunn, his own wife. Besides, Thomas McCunn and Mrs. McCunn were made trustees of the estate for six years. At the expiration of that time they were to dispose of it as follows:—One-half of the whole estate to go to the widow, the other half to go to James and Thomas McCunn, the two brothers of the Judge, after paying $5,000 each to the two children of James Gano, $5,000 each to the Judge's two sisters, $3,000 to a third and $1,000 to an aunt of his residing in Ireland. The will was admitted to probate by Surrogate Hutchings the October following the month in which the Judge died. The will at the time was contested by parties by the name of Hettrick, who claimed to be half-blood relations. Their claims, however, were thrown out. In a year after the will was admitted to probate I received my dowry in full. During that time Mr. Gano managed the estate, with my consent. He continued to have the control of it for two years and nine months after the probate of the will. I finally came to the conclusion that he was not managing the estate properly and that he was squandering money derived from the estate in a reckless manner. I wrote to Mr. Thomas McCunn, who had long before advised me not to have anything to do with Martin Bachmann, a lawyer from Elmira (who is a half brother of Gano's), whom Gano had employed as the lawyer of the estate. Mr. Thomas McCunn was willing that some other lawyer on whom he, myself and Mr. Gano could agree, should be employed in his stead. Mr. Thomas McCunn and myself did employ another lawyer and took the management of the estate into our own hands. For about ten months we were getting along nicely, paying off the debts on the estate gradually, when Gano and Bachman made affidavits to the effect that we were letting the property go to destruction, that we were allowing the mortgages to be foreclosed—in fact, that we were incompetent to manage the estate. On the strength of these affidavits they made a motion before Judge Donohue last March to have us removed and a receiver appointed. We employed a lawyer and placed in his hands counter-affidavits, to be used when the case should come up for argument, but somehow the other side had it postponed from time to time. Finally, we changed our counsel, and when the case came up again he appeared and asked for a week's postponement in order that he could study the case thoroughly, but the Judge only granted a postponement till the next day. Our counsel then advised us to let it go by default, promising to have the case tried in May. The Judge appointed Joseph O'Donohue receiver on the 15th of April. Our counsel then began a suit in Chancery, which was set down to be tried in the second week in May. When the time came for the trial, it was postponed again and again, and finally thrown off the calendar for the term and postponed till the fall term. The receiver took possession on the 14th of April and has had the exclusive management of the estate since then. At the suggestion of my counsel, after the receiver's appointment, I notified the tenants of the estate not to pay rent to the receiver. Some of them, I learn, have not paid him and some have. A lady I rented my own house to refused to pay rent because the receiver had notified her not to. This particular rent, on motion made before the Court, is deposited in a bank, to be accounted for at the conclusion of the pending suit; but as it has been so often postponed, and is now postponed until the fall, I am naturally left without any income from any source. This house was left to me by my husband, free and clear, and independent of the remainder of the estate, yet Gano got a mortgage of $10,000 on it to pay off a mortgage of foreclosure of $5,000 on one of the houses of the estate. The fact is, I was like a child in his hands while he had control of the estate, and thinking him honest and doing everything for the best I consented to every suggestion he made concering the estate. About three weeks ago Mr. Thomas McCunn was served with a paper, signed by Judge Donohue, ordering him and me to appear before the receiver to give an account of our management of the estate and to give up all papers and documents relating to the estate to the receiver. No notice of this kind was served upon me, and I only heard of it through Mr. McCunn. Mr. McCunn, on being served with this summons, placed it in the hands of our counsel, who told him that he would see to it, for him not to pay any attention to it. The summons gave Mr. McCunn six days within which to do as it required. In accordance with the instructions of our counsel we paid no attention to it, and the next thing that happened was the arrest of both of us this morning for contempt of court, and here we are in Ludlow Street Jail. I will say in conclusion that Mr. McCunn has none of the papers concerning the estate, that I have them and that I refuse to give them up to any one for the reason that I regard the action brought against us as an illegal one, literally without cause. The will of my husband, besides making me a co-executor with Thomas McCunn and James M. Gano, made me, with Thomas McCunn, trustee of the estate for six years, and I am therefore justified, in my opinion, in my refusal to give up the papers of the estate. Let me add here that the chief charge of mismanagement of the estate made against me and Mr. McCunn, made by Gano and Bachmann, is that while we were in charge of it we allowed the mortgages to be foreclosed. The fact is that not one mortgage on any property belonging to the estate was foreclosed during the time we had the management of it, whereas while Gano had the control several mortgages were foreclosed. The motion made by Gano to have a receiver appointed was joined in by one Elizabeth Patterson, who claims to be a relative of the late Judge McCunn. She asked for a receiver as well as Gano, and had as her lawyer Christopher Fine. I never heard of the woman before in my life. I regard the whole case as a conspiracy on the part of Gano and Bachmann to wreak their vengeance upon me. Having been deprived of the control of the estate, they determined, if they could not rule, to ruin.

MR. GANO'S STATEMENT.

Having obtained the widow's side of the story the reporter called upon Mr. Gano at his office in West Thirty-fourth street. Mr. Gano is, to all appearances, yet a young man. He was quick and intelligent in his replies to the various questions put to him. He consented with reluctance to make a statement for publication. The statement he made in answer to the reporter's questions was as follows:—

In a codicil to Judge McCunn's will I was named as one of the executors. He appointed in the will his wife and his brother, Thomas McCunn, executors. The will does not specify them as trustees, but it creates a trust and appoints them to take care of the trust. The dispute between them and me is as to whether I am a trustee jointly with them. There is now a suit pending to decide this question, as well as the validity of the will. A receiver was appointed on my motion, because I did not think the property safe in their hands. I managed the estate from the Judge's death up to May, 1875. When I went away in the country last July, an agent was appointed to collect the rents of the estate, and deposit them in the Shoe and Leather Bank, subject to the joint order of the three executors. While I was away Mrs. McCunn and Thomas McCunn closed up this account and took the management into their own hands, ignoring me altogether. My counsel, W. W. MacFarland, advised me to bring a suit to have the disputed question settled. The validity of the will is being contested by Elizabeth Patterson, a daughter of a half brother to the Judge, on a technical point, the claim being that a certain clause of the will is void. The point of the contest, if sustained, would have the effect of giving the real estate to the heirs-at-law, the widow simply getting her third. As to the arrest of Mrs. McCunn and Thomas McCunn I have had nothing whatever to do with it, and do not know of my own knowledge whether the receiver has had them arrested for contempt. However, I was served sometime in March with an order by the receiver ordering me to turn over to him all books, papers, &c., relating to the estate in my hands, and I suppose the other executors were served with a similar notice. When they commenced to act with me in May, 1875, I gave them the combination of the safe in which the papers, &c., were. They at once changed the combination, so that, even if I wanted to, I could not get at them. Not having any papers, therefore, when the order of the receiver was served on me, I made answer accordingly. I presume if Mrs. McCunn and Thomas did not obey the order of the receiver and they have been arrested at his instance, it is for contempt of court.

In answer to a question of the reporter Mr. Gano said:—If Mrs. McCunn and Thomas were not incompetent in the management of the estate I do not think that the Judge would have granted the appointment of a receiver. In my affidavits I alleged mismanagement on their part, from facts that could not be denied. He also added: While the motion for the appointment of a receiver was tending, statements were made that my accounts were in arrears for the time I managed the estate. These statements were entirely unfounded. The accounts are now in the hands of Rufus F. Andrews, the referee on the case, and his decision will show that they were correct. As an instance of the way the estate was managed by Mrs. McCunn and Thomas, Mr. Gano stated that since the will was offered for probate they had employed fourteen different set of counsel, among them such prominent men as B. F. Dunning, A. Oakey Hall, Judge Fancher and W. W. McFarland. This instance alone, Mr. Gano believed, showed that Mrs. McCunn and Thomas McCunn lack the business capacity necessary to manage such a large estate as Judge McCunn had left.

HOW WILL IT ALL END?

It will be seen by the statements of Mrs. McCunn on the one side and that of Mr. Gano on the other that there is a wide margin left for speculation as to which one tells the truth. Mrs. McCunn's case comes up on the 28th inst. and Thomas McCunn's on the 1st of July. As the lady stoutly asserts that she will not obey the receiver's orders to give up the books and papers in her possession and will not give bail, her stay in Ludlow street will doubtless be a prolonged one and the upshot may be the blowing open of a safe by order of the Court and a new case for the lawyers with more complications than the combinations of the safe lock itself.

A SAD CASE OF DESTITUTION.

A CHILD STARVED TO DEATH IN A CANAL BOAT AT JERSEY CITY.

A heartrending case of distress was brought to the attention of the Jersey City authorities yesterday. Mr. Hewitt, Overseer of the Poor, proceeded to a half-sunken canal boat lying in the Central Railroad basin, in the southern part of the city, and in the cabin he found a woman named Anna Wadsworth keeping watch over her four children, one of whom was dead. She related a pitiful story of her suffering. Her husband had been out of work for some time, and failing to obtain employment in this section he started for Troy four days ago, leaving his family without a morsel of food. One of the children, a girl named Emma, five years old, became very sick, and on Thursday night she sank rapidly. At intervals she cried for nourishment, as did the other children, but there was none at hand. At midnight, Emma, who was nestling in the arms of the distracted mother, shrieked out that some one was trying to catch her and take her away. There was no lamp in the place, but the mother lighted a match and made a search, but saw no one. The poor woman mixed some flour in a pail, but could not induce the child to swallow it. The little one then commenced to scream wildly and soon became delirious. When the mother reached this part of her story her utterance became choked and big tears rolled down her face. "I took my child," she continued, "and went on deck. She cried for food and I had none to give. O God! why didn't you let me go with my darling, and not leave me here to see more suffering?" Here she broke down completely, and when she became partially reconciled to her misfortune she continued:—"My darling said, 'I am dying, mamma.' I prayed that she might not die till the light came, and the Lord heard my prayer, and I held my baby until the daylight came, and then she died." There was such an intensely melancholy ring about the last sentence that the three gentlemen who heard the story turned aside as the mother passionately closed her narrative by kissing the dead child again and again. It was only with great difficulty that she could be induced to allow the Overseer of the Poor to arrange the corpse for burial. It appears that the children had been in a Catholic institution in New York; but the mother would not leave them there, as she said she was not content to have them away from her. She was also afraid that the doctors would cut up her dead child, but she was assured she could follow it to the grave. Mr. James McCarthy, a kind hearted gentleman, handed her $5. Coroner Gannon will hold an inquest.

OBITUARY.

STOCKTON BROWN.

Mr. Stockton Brown, well known in this city, died yesterday morning at the residence of Colonel G. K. Lansing, No. 325 East Thirty-second street. Mr. Brown was born in Windsor, N. J., and at the age of thirty removed to Charlton, Saratoga county, N. Y., where he held the position of Supervisor ten years. Thence he went to Palatine Bridge, Montgomery county, in 1865, and engaged in business under the firm name of Brown & Beach, in which business he continued up to the time of his death. During the year 1873 he was appointed by Governor Dix to the office of Port Warden of the harbor of New York, and was elected President of the Board, occupying that position when he died. He was chosen as alternate from his district to the Cincinnati Convention, and took an active part therein. He returned on Monday last from the Convention, and on his arrival was too sick to warrant his return to Palatine Bridge. From that time he never left his bed. His disease is supposed to have been acute inflammation of the bowels.

ROBERT NAPIER, THE SHIPBUILDER.

A cable telegram from Glasgow, Scotland, under date of yesterday, reports the occurrence of the death of Robert Napier, the well-known shipbuilder. Mr. Napier was eighty-five years of age. He was born in Dumbarton, Scotland, on the 18th of June, in the year 1791. His father was a blacksmith. The boy received a very good education in the grammar school of his native town and was instructed, at the charge of his parents, in architecture and mathematical drawing. In the year 1807 he was apprenticed to his father, and continued to work in the shop until the year 1811. Then he removed to Edinburgh, where he adopted the trade of a millwright. Here he worked at very low wages until the year 1815, when he commenced business on his own account in Glasgow. His cash capital was $250. Of this he used $225 for the purchase of the goodwill of a blacksmith's business and the tools of the shop. In the year 1821 he engaged in the works of ironfounding and engineering. In the year 1823 he made his first steam engine for a vessel trading between Dumbarton and Glasgow. Years later, in 1839, he furnished the machinery for the British Queen to ply to New York. Mr. Napier subscribed toward the trial of the Sirius, the first steam vessel to cross the Atlantic, and, in 1853, he fitted up the machinery of the British war ship Duke of Wellington. He took his sons into partnership in the year 1853; the firm being thenceforth known as that of Robert Napier & Sons. They undertook for the English Admiralty in 1859 the contract for the building of the famous iron-clad, the Black Prince, and have since completed the Hector and constructed a great number of steam rams and iron-cased ships for the British and foreign governments. The deceased was at one time President of the Institution of Mechanical Engineers.

GEORGE C. EASTWOOD, ONE OF THE "SIX HUNDRED."

George Carter Eastwood, an English soldier of the Crimean war, and one of the "six hundred" who charged at Balaklava, died at his residence, Tenth avenue and 178th street, New York, on the 17th inst. He was born in Sussex county, England, in the year 1832, enlisted in the Queen's service at the age of nineteen years in the Thirteenth light dragoons, and was twelve years on foreign service. He fought all through the Crimean war, and was present at the gallant charge of Balaklava, where he saved the life of his officer, Colonel Tremagne, when they were under a heavy fire. He was discharged on the reduction of the English army in the year 1862, and appointed a superintending officer of the Kent county prisons, Maidstone, England, which situation he filled with the greatest credit. Failing health compelled him to resign. He came to New York in 1868, worked as a carpenter, and has died of illness brought on by hard work, at the age of forty-three years, leaving a wife and six small children to deplore his loss.

The Plea of Abatement in the Crooked Whiskey Suits.

Progress of the Anti-Elevated Railroad Suits.

Nearly nine years ago Alexander & Co. sold to Vermilye & Co., bankers, some government seven-thirty bonds, for which the latter paid $10,895 90. Shortly after the purchase Vermilye & Co. sent them to the Assistant United States Treasury for redemption. They were redeemed without hesitancy, but it was soon discovered that the bonds were forged, and upon this discovery Vermilye & Co. were notified of the fact and requested to refund the amount paid for their redemption. These facts were made known to Alexander & Co., with a request that they make the amount of the purchase money good. This request, however, was not complied with, and as Vermilye & Co. failed also to comply with the request made by the government a suit was brought on behalf of the latter against the firm in the United States courts to recover the amounts paid for the bonds. At the first trial a verdict was given for the government, from which an appeal was taken and a new trial ordered. A similar result followed the second trial and the amount of the judgment was paid by Vermilye & Co to the government. Not satisfied with this termination of the case Vermilye & Co. brought suit against Alexander & Co. to recover the amount originally paid for the bonds. This suit came to trial yesterday before Judge Van Vorst, holding Supreme Court, Circuit. Testimony was given showing the above state of facts, and a verdict was promptly rendered for $10,012 29 for the plaintiffs, being the full amount claimed, with interest. The result shows the "law's delay" in rather a forcible light.

CONVICTION OF COUNTERFEITERS.

Charlotte Thompson, who was arrested some time ago and subsequently indicted for passing counterfeit five dollar notes of the National Bank of Hampden, Massachusetts, was yesterday placed on trial in the United States Circuit Court, before Judge Benedict. The accused acted as the shover of the queer, in the parlance of the profession, for John H. Gill, the notorious "boodle carrier." District Attorney Pullman conducted the case for the government. Mr. Purdy, who appeared as counsel for both Thompson and Gill, endeavored to have Gill's case take precedence of that of his female accomplice. Counsel's object was to use the woman as a witness for Gill. Mr. Pullman opposed this and contended that the cases should be taken up in the regular order on the calendar. The case was then proceeded with. A number of witnesses testified to having had the counterfeit bills passed on them, they giving good money in change therefor to the prisoner Thompson. The jury returned a verdict of guilty. The case of Gill was then called, when he plead guilty. The prisoners were remanded for sentence.

A CROOKED WHISKEY CASE.

The case of Philip H. Tuska, one of the alleged crooked whiskey operators, came up yesterday before Judge Benedict in the United States Circuit Court on the District Attorney's demurrer to the plea in abatement filed by the defendant's counsel. General Forster, for the prosecution, agreed on the part of the government that the defendant could not avail himself to avoid the indictment of any irregularities in the selection of the Grand Jury which found the bill against him, unless it was suggested by his plea that he had been prejudiced thereby, and that the United States courts were only required to conform so far as in their discretion seemed practicable to the usages and laws of the State with regard to the selection of jurors. The argument for the defendant will be heard by Judge Benedict in Brooklyn on Wednesday next.

THE RAPID TRANSIT FIGHT.

In the suit brought by the Ninth Avenue Railroad Company against the Greenwich Elevated Railroad Company, being tried before Judge Van Hoesen, in Special Term of the Court of Common Pleas, there was yesterday the same tiresome repetition of previous testimony as to the effect upon horses of trains passing over the Elevated Railroad. The witnesses examined were W. H. Dilworth, D. Ogden Bradley, Charles E. Feuman, Dr. Charles A Stoddard, editor New York Observer; Reuben Hoyt, Henry J. Chapman, E. G. Van Horn, John C. Bishop, George H. Bend, Archibald F. Cushman, John H. H. Cushman, James A. Whitney, Cyrus Clark, Christian Saunders and Alonzo P. Decker. The examination will be resumed again on Monday, and every effort will be made to finish the case next week. On Monday will commence the summing up before Judge Sedgwick, of the Superior Court, in the writ of the Sixth Avenue Railroad Company against the Gilbert Elevated Railway Company.

SUMMARY OF LAW CASES.

Judge Donohue yesterday granted a temporary injunction against the proprietors of the "Jones' Wood Colosseum," restraining them from giving further performances until they pay their license fee.

The taking of testimony, which was to have been continued yesterday before Mr. Isaac Dayton, as referee, in relation to the affairs of the Bleecker Street Railroad, was adjourned until Tuesday next, owing to the absence of some material witnesses and the engagement of some of the counsel in the case.

Chief Justice Waite, of the Supreme Court of the United States, yesterday morning visited the Post Office and made a general tour of the building. He was escorted by Postmaster James through the several departments under his control. Subsequently he visited the United States courts and offices, remaining for some time in the judges' chambers with Judges Blatchford and Benedict.

On an order of arrest issued by Judge Donohue, of the Supreme Court, Charles O'Connor, Superintendent of the Newsboys' Lodging House was yesterday arrested on a charge of seducing the wife of Thomas L. Tighe, an attaché of the institution. He promptly gave bail in $10,000 to answer the charge. Mr. Wilson, of the First National Bank, and Mr. Charles L. Brace, of the Children's Aid Society, being the sureties.

The attachment recently granted in the Supreme Court at the suit of Alda vs. Walker and others against the property in this State of the New Central Coal Company of Pennsylvania, was yesterday vacated by Judge Sedgwick, of the Superior Court.

In the divorce suit of Grace against Grace, already noticed in the HERALD, Mr. Henry C. Dennison, counsel for the husband, entered an order yesterday, in conformity with Judge Van Hoesen's decision, referring the case to Counsellor Bushnell to take testimony on the question of alimony. Meantime Mr. Grace, feeling aggrieved at the report of the case in the New York Sun, has brought a libel suit against that paper. The summons and complaint were served yesterday.

In the suit of Isaacs against the Board of Education, to recover $1,617 79 for work done on school No. 64, in Fordham, Chief Justice Shea, in Part 2 of the Marine Court, yesterday, reserved his decision on a motion to dismiss the complaint. The motion was made by Assistant Corporation Counsel Regnier on the ground that plaintiff had not submitted a certificate of the Superintendent of Public Schools and Trustees that the work was properly done, as required by law.

Judge Larremore, holding Supreme Court Circuit, has had before him for the past three weeks a case quite as tedious and tiresome as either of the rapid transit suits, the case on trial being that brought by the assignee of Michael Noonan to recover some $30,000, claimed to be due on contracts with the city for constructing sewers. The taking of testimony was concluded yesterday, and counsel will sum up on Monday.

Suits have been commenced in the United States District Court against the following named defendants and their sureties to recover balances of duties alleged to be due by them on their bonds:—Judah Van Praag, three cases; John Hobbs, two cases; Isaac B. Wellington, L. R. J. Spellman, Charles Parker, Jules A. Towmade, two cases; Charles Ferrers, John J. Townsend, two cases; William Schules, Charles Ferrero, John Ruppecht, Arthur Hernsheim, L. P. Dodge, Thomas McLeod, W. H. Valentine, Charles Ewald, G. Volger, William B. Hunter, Thomas J. Daly, Caleb Nicholson, S. J. Philips, James D. Warner and M. C. Rodriguez.

Two suits of William H. Seaver, collector of John L. Brown, against the city for balance due on street paving contracts were recently compromised for about $130,000. Counsel for Mr. Seaver applied for an injunction against the payment by the Comptroller until the amount of their claim for professional services was paid, and Philo T. Ruggles was appointed referee. The referee's report was yesterday before Judge Donohue for confirmation. This was opposed on the ground that no notice was given to attend the reference. Judge Donohue took the papers, reserving decision.

In the matter of the contested will of James Mairs, deceased, argument was had yesterday before Surrogate Calvin on a motion made by contestant's counsel that the Surrogate deny the probate of the will. Counsel submitted at length the grounds for his motion, the principal being that there were suspicious marginal notes; that the word "adopted" before the word son was written with different ink, &c., and that the deceased at the time of making the will in question gave his age as seventy when he was really older, and also that the party in whose possession the will was for a considerable time should come into court and be examined with regard to the marginal notes, &c. The Court ruled that the party in question should be put on the stand, and adjourned the case till the 18th of July.

GENERAL SESSIONS—PART I.

Before Recorder Hackett.

A SNEAK THIEF OVERHAULED.

George M. Ash was placed at the bar charged with having stolen an overcoat from the residence of Mr. Julian A. Husted, No. 32 West Fiftieth street. The coat was carried away from the hatstand, and the prisoner having been found guilty he was sent to the Penitentiary for six months.

AN ACQUITTAL.

Louis Kerintzki was charged with receiving goods, consisting of wearing apparel, alleged to have been stolen from Mr. E. J. Jackson, No. 130 East Fifty-third street, in the month of October. The evidence not being sufficient to sustain the charge the Recorder directed a verdict of acquittal.

PLEAS AND SENTENCES.

Henry Martin, of No. 210 East Sixty-third street, pleaded guilty to the charge of having, on the 16th inst., snatched a pocketbook from Miss Jennie Connell, of No. 621 Lexington avenue, while walking along the street. The prisoner was sentenced to three years imprisonment in the State Prison.

John Murphy, of No. 196 Mott street, stole a boat belonging to William Wallace, of No. 160 South street, on the 15th inst. He was caught in the act of rowing off in the boat, and, having pleaded guilty, was sent to the State Prison for two years and a half.

John Oates, of No. 115 Hester street, burglariously entered the premises of Theodore H. Hurry, No. 120 Mulberry street, on the 17th inst. and carried off two rifles. He pleaded guilty and was sent to the State Prison for three years.

Frank Roche pleaded guilty to the charge of attempting to commit petit larceny from the person of J. J. Nealis, in Mott street, on the 14th inst., and was sentenced to be imprisoned in the Penitentiary for one year.

AN EASY VICTIM.

Shortly after Daniel Mangam had been swindled by the bogus Police Commissioner Erhardt out of $100, a young man who gave his name as Anthony Brownson, a cigarmaker, of No. 141 Ridge street, thought he would raise the wind at the expense of the same victim. He called on Mangam and told him that his friend Police Commissioner Erhardt had lost $10 playing billiards at the St. Nicholas Hotel, and that being short of funds he was sent to him to get the amount mentioned. Mangan had only $5, which he gave to Brownson, but soon ascertained that he had been duped for the second time. The prisoner was arrested, and, having pleaded guilty to the charge of obtaining money under false pretences, was sentenced to six months imprisonment.

GENERAL SESSIONS—PART II.

Before Judge Gildersleeve.

UTTERING FORGED BONDS.

The trial of Charles I. Williamson, who is indicted for uttering a forged bond of the Buffalo, New York and Erie Railway Company, was resumed yesterday, Messrs. Rollins and Lyon, Assistant District Attorneys, appearing for the prosecution, and Mr. A. Oakey Hall for the prisoner. Among the witnesses examined were Mr. John Sparks, Clerk of the Court of General Sessions; Mr. William Anderson, stenographer, the latter testifying as to the correctness of his notes taken at the previous trial of the prisoner, under a similar indictment; Mr. Francis G. Ogden, Treasurer of the Guaranty and Indemnity Company, and Mr. Charles G. Miller, President of the Buffalo, New York and Erie Railway Company. Mr. Ogden deposed that on August 8, 1873, the prisoner received a check for $14,800 on a forged $20,000 bond of the Buffalo, New York and Erie Railway. Mr. Miller proved that the bond was a forgery. The further hearing of the case was adjourned until Monday morning.

POLICE COURT NOTES.

At the Tombs Police Court yesterday Honora Casey, of No. 60 Roosevelt street, was held to answer for striking her father.

In the Court of Special Sessions yesterday Jacob Gabriel was sentenced to the Penitentiary for one month for abandoning his horse. Several parties were fined for driving maimed horses.

Two boys, named Charles White, aged seventeen years, of No. 500 West Thirty-second street, and Charles McManus, aged sixteen years, of No. 444 West Thirty-first street, were arraigned before Justice Smith, at the Washington Place Police Court, yesterday morning, charged with having forced open the rear basement window of No. 560 Seventh avenue, the residence of Henry Becker, at three o'clock yesterday morning, and stealing three dresses, the property of Eliza Schmidt, a domestic employed in the place. Mr. Becker heard them forcing open the window and gave an alarm. The prisoners attempted to escape by an adjoining alleyway, but were captured with the stolen property in their possession by Officer Osborne, of the Twentieth precinct. They were each held, in default of $1,000 bail, to await the action of the Grand Jury.

John Brady, alias Donoghue, a professional thief, was committed by Justice Smith for attempting to rob the till of the store No. 287 Seventh avenue, kept by John Flashman. He was arrested by Officer Kane, of the Sixteenth precinct.

Samuel Rowe and Charles Corcoran, two raggedly clad boys, were arraigned before Justice Smith, at the Washington Place Police Court yesterday, on complaint of Oliver M. Shaw, starter of the Tenth and Christopher street line of street cars, who charged them with stealing $2 from the farebox of one of the cars. The boys, who said they were not guilty, were committed in default of $300 bail each.

While Mrs. Mary Ritter, of No. 144 East Thirty-eighth street, was walking through Sixth avenue yesterday, Louis Heller, aged nineteen, who claims to be a blacksmith, residing at No. 259 Rivington street, snatched her pocketbook, containing $10, from her hand and made off. He was captured by Officer Smith, of the Sixteenth precinct, after a long chase, and on being arraigned before Justice Smith, at the Washington Place Court, yesterday afternoon, said he was guilty. He was fully committed for trial, and the papers forwarded to the District Attorney's office.

David McDonald, a bricklayer, residing at No. 442 Tenth avenue, was arrested yesterday by Detective Murphy, of the Twentieth precinct, for breaking into the house of John Stroh, No. 445 Tenth avenue, and carrying off a quantity of lead pipe.

John O. Sullivan, a resident of Hudson, N. Y., while drunk yesterday morning, deliberately walked overboard at pier 45 North River. He was fished out after considerable difficulty with a boathook by Officer Mulligan, of the Eighth precinct. On his being brought before Justice Smith, at the Washington Place Court, he was perfectly sober and looked so woe begone that he was discharged from custody.

INTERESTING RAILROAD SUIT.

Yesterday an appeal was argued in the General Term of the Brooklyn City Court, from an order of the Court below, refusing to grant a new trial in the case of Edward Ralph, Jr., against the Brooklyn City Railroad Company. The suit was brought to recover $20,000 damages for injuries received through the negligence of the company. It was tried before Judge Neilson. On the night of November 9, 1874, Mr. Ralph came down Rodney street to Kent avenue to take a car. He slipped on the track, and, striking his forehead, became insensible. Another car coming along in an opposite direction drove over him, crushing his left leg so that it was necessary to amputate it. He recovered a verdict in the sum of $12,000. The company maintain that they are not responsible and that there was no negligence on the part of their servants, and upon that ground they appeal from the verdict. Decision was reserved.

DECISION IN ADMIRALTY.

Yesterday a decision in Admiralty was filed by Judge Benedict, of the United States Circuit Court, dismissing the libels against the bark Vincenzo Perotto, which were brought by Sanchez D. Dolz and Charles F. Emerson. The action was brought to recover damages in the sum of $40,000, occasioned by a collision off Cape Hatteras, N. C., on May 2, 1876, between the brig Martha and the Perotto, in which the brig went down. The Court holds that the brig was sunk on account of her being kept away instead of holding her course, as it was her duty to do. The decision is regarded as highly important, as it will be a warning to mariners in future to keep on their proper course.

THE MOULTON-BEECHER SUIT.

Yesterday at a General Term of the Supreme Court of the State of New York, the Moulton-Beecher demurrer, which was argued in May last, at Poughkeepsie, by Messrs. Shearman and Roger A. Pryor, was considered. The Court reversed the decision of Judge Dykman, which therefore accords Mr. Moulton the right to bring the action despite the nolle prosequi which was entered by the District Attorney in the matter of the indictment. Judges Barnard and Gilbert concur in the decision. Mr. Beecher's counsel will now doubtless appeal to the Court of Appeals.

ALLEGED COUNTERFEITERS.

Ansellemo Aguilla and Bush Aguilla, the St. Domingo negroes who were arrested on Wednesday last on charge of passing two counterfeit five dollar bills on the National Bank of Hampden, Mass., were arraigned before United States Commissioner Winslow, in Brooklyn. They waived examination, and were held to await the action of the Grand Jury. Bail was fixed in each case at $5,000.

BRUTAL ASSAULT.

Yesterday an examination took place before Justice Walsh, Brooklyn, in the case of John McLaughlin, Joseph Wolfe, and James and William Brennan, the men who are charged with having brutally assaulted Felix Aremide and Michael Biancomano, two Italian rag pickers, on the morning of the 16th inst. The two Italians testified to the assault, and Charles Woodcock corroborated their testimony in part. Justice Walsh then committed the prisoners to await the action of the Grand Jury. The prisoners—who pleaded not guilty—were remanded to jail. They will be tried during the July term of the Kings County Court of Sessions.

ALABAMA CLAIMS.

WASHINGTON, June 23, 1876.

In the Court of Commissioners of Alabama Claims yesterday the following judgments were announced for the loss of personal effects and wages by the destruction of various vessels:—

Case 1,593—Nathaniel A. Coulliard, Boston, $1,131.
Case 1,595—John Silver, Provincetown, Mass., $572.
Case 1,612—Peter H. Whiteberry, Brooklyn, N.Y., $850.
Case 1,613—James Crawford, Brooklyn, N. Y., $1,082.
Case 1,615—Edward B. Peck, South Berwick, Me., $245.
Case 1,617—Charles B. Bailey, Bristol, Me., $636 05.
Case 1,616—Edward Sherman, New York, by next friend for loss of merchandise on the Golden Rule, destroyed by the Alabama, January 26, 1863, $150 12. Case 1,744—Mary E. White, New York, for loss of merchandise by destruction of the Electric Spark by the Florida, June 10, 1864, $855 63.

Interest was allowed in the above cases at four per cent from the date of loss.

GAMBLERS AT ROCKAWAY.

Since the trips of the boats to Rockaway Beach commenced the beach has daily swarmed with gamblers, and, notwithstanding the efforts of the officers to prevent it, many of the visitors have been fleeced of money and jewelry. On Monday the officers received positive orders to drive the three-card monte men from the beach. It is their habit to take the beach from the Seaside House to Holland's. Yesterday the gang put in an appearance, as usual, led by Valentine, the "Chow Chow" man, and one John McDermott. The game was opened and was soon in full blast, when Officer Wiley, of Jamaica, appeared and arrested McDermott, who was dealing. The cappers attempted to rescue him from the officer, who was obliged to draw his revolver to prevent it, and finally succeeded in getting his man on the cars and took him to Jamaica, together with the layout, cards and board. Upon arraignment before Justice Bennett McDermott pleaded guilty and was placed under bonds of $500 to appear for trial. The officers allege that all the gamblers have season tickets on the boats.

CAPTURE OF YOUNG BURGLARS.

At one o'clock yesterday Roundman Conway and Officer Bavier heard the sound of footsteps on the tin roof of a woodshed in the rear of Mr. William Taylor's residence, Grove street, near Montgomery, Jersey City. The officers posted themselves so as to cut off escape and succeeded in arresting two young men, who gave their names as William Brown and Louis Treitze, aged nineteen and sixteen respectively. Brown gave his residence as No. 199 East Houston street, New York, and Treitze No. 350 Ninth street. When brought before Justice Keese they were separated. Each one contradicted the other's story in nearly every particular. They were committed for trial.

THE JERSEY ELECTION RIOTS.

Ex-Freeholder O'Grady, who was convicted of an atrocious assault on Patrick J. Condon, Chairman of the Second District Democratic Convention at Jersey City, was sentenced yesterday to pay a fine of $250 and costs. Judge Hoffman, in passing sentence, said:—"It is but justice to myself to say that the sentence is not my judgment; you may be thankful to the associate judges and your friends that you escaped imprisonment. The Court will not entertain an appeal, and if the fine and costs be not promptly paid sentence of imprisonment will follow."

KNOCKED DOWN AND ROBBED.

Ellen McLaughlin, of No. 322 West Fifteenth street, was on her way home through Worth street late on Thursday night, and when near Centre street she was assaulted by James McMahon, of No. 242 Monroe street, and David Scanlan, of No. 55 Mulberry street, who knocked her down and snatched from her hand a wallet containing $2. They were making off with their booty when Officer Cowen, of the Sixth precinct, arrested them. They were held to answer by Justice Murray in $1,000 bail each.

A YOUTHFUL THIEF.

On Thursday evening John Honey, a butcher, doing business at No. 1 Franklin street, took from his pocket a roll of promissory notes and greenbacks amounting in all to $175 and laid it on a desk in his store. The money was missing shortly after, and Honey suspecting Mary Ann Hogan, aged thirteen years, whom he had seen playing around his premises, caused her arrest by Detective Handy, of the Sixth precinct. She confessed to having taken the money and given it to Ann Mealia, of No. 57 Baxter street. The latter was also taken into custody and yesterday Justice Murray at the Tombs held the girls in $1,000 bail each to answer.

AMERICAN BEEF FOR EUROPE.

An interesting experiment is being made at the abattoir on the Hackensack River, by Dr. J. J. Craven, in order to test the feasibility of transporting beef, without injury, to the European markets. A wooden structure rendered air tight has been erected, corresponding to the 'tween deck of a steamer, with beams and hooks running longitudinally. Here will be hung up the dead animals in rows as closely together as in any of our abattoirs. The temperature of the compartment is kept as low as 22 degrees by means of pipes through which water is forced by a small pump from a tank containing ice and salt. The salt is held in solution in sufficient quantity to prevent the water from freezing in the pipes. The experiment was commenced five days ago, and it is to be continued for eighteen days. Should the test prove successful, a most important problem will have been solved. It will be recollected that one of the British steamers plying to this port carried to Liverpool about two months ago a large quantity of beef, and when placed in the market it had not deteriorated. The Abattoir and Stock Yard Company is prepared to invest sufficient capital to charter a steamer which will carry an immense supply of meat to foreign markets. They only await the success of the experiment now in progress.

COLLISION IN THE RIVER.

Yesterday afternoon, while the ferryboat Newark, of the Desbrosses street line, was crossing the river on her way to New York, she collided with a sloop. Her fore cabin was carried away, and she was so badly damaged that it will be necessary to lay her up for repairs. No person was injured, although many were much frightened.

TAXING RAILROAD COMPANIES.

The horse railroad companies of Jersey City were compelled by a law passed in 1859 to pay an annual license fee of $10 for each car to the city. This license they paid up to 1867, but have paid nothing since. The city authorities now intend to compel these companies to pay the arrears.

REDUCING TEACHERS' SALARIES.

The Board of Finance of Jersey City has resolved to reduce the salaries of the teachers in the public schools ten per cent. The Board of Education stubbornly refused to take this step while all the other Boards in the city government reduced their expenses. The Board of Finance has at last insisted on the reduction.

THE OLD GUARD.

The famous Old Guard of this city will embark to-day on the steamer Charleston, at pier No. 29, foot of Warren street, for Charleston, S. C. On Wednesday, June 28, the battalion will participate in the Centennial anniversary of the battle of Fort Sullivan, forming, with the Boston Light Infantry and Washington Light Infantry, of Charleston, S. C., a detachment of the Centennial Legion. On its return home the Old Guard will escort hither the Clinch Rifles, of Savannah, Ga., which organization will visit the Centennial Exhibition.

The Old Guard takes with it for presentation—one to the Washington Light Infantry of Charleston, S. C., and the other to the Boston (Mass.) Light Infantry—two fine medals, alike in artistic design and execution. These medals are between the size of a fifty cent silver piece and that of a trade dollar. They are of gold, and have a raised rim. The obverse presents the design, in the upper segment, of a tiger, free or running, in sun rays, with the motto underneath:—

DE NOVO JUVENTUTEM AGIMUS.

The inscription on one of the medals is:—

MAJOR GEORGE W. M'LEAN,
Old Guard, N. Y.,
to the
WASHINGTON LIGHT INFANTRY,
Charleston, S. C.

The only difference between the medals is, of course, in substitution of the title of the "Boston Light Infantry, Boston, Mass.," for that of the Charleston corps. On the reverse side of each medal are the words in clear cut letters, in waving lines—

Commemorative of the Centennial Anniversary of our National Independence,
Philadelphia, July 4, 1876.

Each medal is suspended by a blue ribbon from an artistic combination of miniature military trophies also wrought in gold.

THE EXPLODED TUGBOAT.

The Steamboat Inspectors yesterday continued the investigation into the cause of the explosion of the tugboat Workman.

Chester H. Corson testified that at eight o'clock on the evening preceding the explosion he saw the fireman on the Workman getting up steam; he asked him what it was for, and if he was going out; the fireman replied "No," but the boat was leaking and he wanted to pump her out; witness then went to bed, and awoke at one o'clock on hearing the Workman blowing off steam; he fell asleep then and awoke again at ten minutes before six, and heard a loud hissing of steam from the tug; just as he was getting out of bed to see what it meant the explosion occurred; he then made his escape the best way he could, together with his wife, from the lighter, which sunk almost immediately.

The engineer, J. W. Finch, stated that the getting up of steam at eight o'clock by the fireman was in opposition to his direct orders. The boat only leaked a very little, and they should have pumped her out with the hand pump instead of setting the donkey engine at work. He says that he left the tug at half-past five o'clock in the evening, and that there was not then a pound of steam on her; also that he told the fireman not to get up steam until half-past five o'clock the following morning.

"EX-ENGINEER" CRITICIZED.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD:—

The article in the HERALD of yesterday on the explosion of the tugboat Workman, signed "Ex-Engineer," is opportune and very properly calls attention to the general defectiveness of one of the most important appendages of steam boilers—viz., safety valves, from want of proper and constant attention from the engineers having them in charge.

"Ex-Engineer" should also have called attention to the defective style of steam gauges in common use. The clock-face gauge that holds universal sway over nearly all steam generators depends upon the reliability of the spring or springs to denote the strain upon the boiler. This is a dangerous dependence, and many explosions can be traced directly to the defective spring gauges. It might be truthfully asserted that every person above the age of ten years is aware of the unreliability of any spring that is constantly subjected to a severe strain. Some better method ought to be adopted for measuring the pressure on steam boilers. The engineer in charge of the watch keeps his eye almost constantly upon his gauge; therefore that instrument should be of the most reliable description possible, and that dependence can be safely placed upon the mercurial column only. No other gauge should be allowed to be used.

The mercurial column is the standard by which all spring gauges are tested, and by which they are watched. Then why not supersede the present unreliable spring gauge of commerce with the mercury column gauge, wherein the pressure upon the boiler is measured by the direct weight of a column of mercury, and be safe in this particular at least?

ENGINEER.

CAST UP BY THE TIDE.

At a very early hour yesterday morning a canal boatman saw a dark object floating in the North River at the foot of Laight street, and, going closer, discovered that it was the body of a man. He brought it ashore, where it was identified as the body of Cornelius Ferdon, the deck hand, who met his death by the explosion of the tugboat Workman on Tuesday last. Decomposition had set in, but the body was not mutilated to a very great degree. The face was easily recognizable. His clothes were torn into shreds. The body, it is thought, lay in the mud near where it was found since the explosion.

THE COMPTROLLER AGAIN PROTESTS.

Bids were to have been opened yesterday by the Department of Public Works for laying Croton mains in Willis avenue and other streets in the annexed district in accordance with the resolution of the Board of Aldermen, but the Comptroller sent in a protest stating that the advertisement did not state under what law the work was to be done. The opening of the bids consequently was laid over until next Tuesday. The amount involved in the contracts is about $300,000.

BOARD OF POLICE.

At a meeting of the Board of Police yesterday the Committee on Elections reported in favor of increasing the election districts in the Twenty-first Assembly district and the Twenty-third and Twenty-fourth wards by adding twelve more.

Patrolman Miller, of the Fourth precinct, was dismissed from the department for fighting.

A communication was received from the Department of Parks requesting the police to prevent people from throwing refuse into the fountain at the Five Points.

The complaints against Captains Lowery, of the Sixth precinct, and Siebert of the Thirty-first, were dismissed.

The steamboat squad was increased to sixty men and four roundsmen.

BRUTAL POLICEMEN.

Patrolman English, of the Twenty-ninth precinct, was placed on trial yesterday before Commissioners Smith and Wheeler, on the complaint of Julius P. Grieble, keeper of a lagerbeer saloon at No. 578 Sixth avenue, charged with entering Mr. Grieble's apartments on Sunday, May 31, and assaulting his wife and servant.

Ex-Judge White appeared for the complainant, and examined Mrs. Grieble, who testified that defendant, dressed in citizen's clothes, came to her house while she was preparing dinner and asked for brandy. She informed him that the saloon was closed and refused him admittance. He then forcibly entered, and, catching her by her wrapper, threw her down and pushed her servant aside. He then left, and subsequently entered with two officers and arrested witness and her husband, taking them to the Thirtieth street station house, where he charged them with violation of the Excise law in selling liquor on Sunday.

Mr. Grieble and Anna Wetling corroborated the previous witness.

Henry Hein, the bartender, testified that his employer had told him not to sell liquor on the day in question and he sold none.

English gave as his defence the statement that he was sent out to enforce the Excise law. He saw parties entering the basement and was satisfied that liquor was being sold inside. He entered and was met by Mrs. Grieble, who shouted up stairs for some one to close the bar, and he heard some person at the head of the stairs call out to shoot him. He denied ill-treating Mrs. Grieble or her servant but made the arrest charged.

The case was referred for decision to the full Board.

Mathew Ryan and his aged mother were at the bar of the Tombs Police Court yesterday. Ryan's head was covered with patches of court plaster and he was weak and faint. His mother exhibited a cut on the head. Officer Sbarboro, attached to the Fourth precinct, said to Justice Wandell that he attempted to arrest Ryan for disorderly conduct; that the prisoner resisted him and flung a lager beer glass at his head, whereupon he had to use his club. The officer admitted striking Mrs. Ryan by accident. Justice Wandell, after hearing the case, said:—"Officer Sbararo, I must say that I can see no justification for the beating you gave this man. There was no necessity for your battering his head in the way you have done. No one would go further than I to sustain an officer in the fair discharge of his duties, but this practice of clubbing citizens, without any reason whatever, is outrageous, and must be stopped. I am sick of seeing men brought here, day after day, with battered and broken heads. If you did not think you were able to arrest this man yourself you could have called assistance, but this clubbing business, I must repeat, was very wrong. I shall commit these prisoners to the care of the doctor of the prison."

A complaint was made yesterday to Superintendent Walling against Officer Crittenden, of the Seventh precinct, charging him with clubbing John Woods, of No. 69 Monroe street, while the latter was quietly sitting on the stoop of his house. The reason given for the assault is that Woods refused to move away at the officer's demand. Crittenden will be placed on trial at an early day.

THE CENTENNIAL RIFLE MATCH.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD:—

Permit me to call attention to a wrong impression which seems to prevail generally in regard to the competitions which have recently taken place on both sides of the Atlantic for places upon the several teams which are to engage in the "Centennial International Rifle Match," at Creedmoor, in September next. In all the comparisons of scores of the American with either of the foreign teams for the purpose of arriving at "percentages" the fact has been lost sight of that, whereas, while the foreign teams have made in each of their competitions forty-five shots per man at 800, 900 and 1,000 yards, the American team has fired fifty shots per man at the same distances, the five extra shots having been fired at 1,000 yards, which, as everybody knows, is by far the most difficult of all three distances. Now, to arrive at a fair comparison of the shooting between the American and either of the foreign teams it is necessary to strike off these extra five shots at the 1,000 yards in each competition, leaving forty-five shots per man to the American team, or fifteen at each distance, as in the practice of the Irish and others. Moreover, in your issue of yesterday, in giving the scores of the Irish team, their percentage is arrived at by selecting the two best scores of each man in three days' competition. If, now, we take the two best scores of the first eight of the Irish team in three days' competition and the two best scores in the last three competitions of the American team we reach the following result, viz.:—

IRISH EIGHT.

Johnson	186	192—378
Goff	182	194—376
Rigby, William	190	177—367
Clarke	175	190—365
Joynt	185	175—360
Eyas	185	174—359
Greenhill	173	179—352
Smyth	167	181—348

AMERICAN EIGHT.

Farwell	198	202—400
Hyde	194	197—391
Weber	195	194—389
Dakin	191	194—385
Yale	198	187—385
Bruce	181	197—378
Shaffer	179	199—378
Fulton	197	189—386
Total for the American eight		3,092
Total for the Irish eight		2,905
Difference		187
Percentage of American eight		85 8-9
Percentage of Irish eight		80 5-7

As the Irish have, so far as any record has been published, shown the highest average scores of any of the foreign teams it is unnecessary to institute a comparison between the American team and any of the others. The purpose of this communication is simply to show that which is the incontestible fact—that, while the foreign teams that are to appear at Creedmoor in September may roll up scores that will make some one or more of them victorious over the American team, yet the scores so far made by the American team far surpass any average long range rifle shooting that has ever yet been done on either side of the Atlantic. I do not doubt that prior to the match in September next this average will be so largely increased as to render victory on the part of the American team fairly well assured. CREEDMOOR.

THE NATIONAL GAME.

THE CHELSEAS BEAT THE ARLINGTONS BY A SCORE OF 17 TO 9.

The first game of the season between the Arlingtons, of this city, and the Chelseas, was played yesterday on the Union Grounds and resulted in the signal defeat of the New Yorkers by a score of 17 to 9. At one time the Arlingtons had a lead of 8 to 0, but finally the Chelseas began to bat Fallon and soon succeeded in rolling up eleven runs. After this the Arlingtons exhibited such unmistakable signs of demoralization that the affair became a farce.

The score is as follows:—

EMIGRATION TO BRAZIL.

A HAMBURG AGENT'S EXPLANATION CONCERNING HIS TRANSACTIONS WITH THE GALICIANS.

HAMBURG, June 7, 1876.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD:—

The sense of justice for which your valuable paper is known convinces me that you will not object to receive the following in reply to an article which appeared in the HERALD of the 21st of May, and which assaults my honor, repeating evident untruths and distorted facts. The greater the influence and power of a paper like yours is the more I am sure you will be careful not to hurt a man's reputation without enabling him to place the matter in the right light before your numerous readers. The following are the facts of the case:—

The Galicians arrived here in the belief that they could from here get to Rio de Janeiro for little or no money. It is very evident that somebody of their native place has, or takes, an interest in making the poor people believe this, for it has several times happened here that some lots of them arrived here who were sent back, partly at their own, partly at the expense of our emigration charity fund; others, who would not return at any price, have gone on to the States and some even to England. There has never been a free emigration to Rio de Janeiro. There has been such to other ports of the Brazils, but probably not for the benefit of the emigrants, as it is entirely prohibited by the Prussian authorities, and the free emigration to these ports has been stopped, too. The Galicians alluded to in the article of your paper arrived here, and when informed that they could not get to Rio de Janeiro or to the Brazils free were advised to return to their homes. Some of their party were, in fact, taken to the Hamburg emigration office and were there persuaded to return to Galicia, but refused distinctly, and a portion who had not the means to go to the States preferred going to England in spite of all demonstrations on the part of myself and our first emigration officer. The other party, who were forwarded by the Cunard line, applied to me for tickets to New York, and, in consideration of the emigrants' poverty, I have booked them at the undernoted very low rates.

Now, with regard to the moneys of the parties, they arrived here not with Austrian florins, but with German reichsmark money, and stated that when they were on their way to Germany at the borders of Austria they were persuaded to change their Austrian into German money. Regarding the story of sweeping the people's money into a drawer, I beg to state that there do not exist, in fact, nor have there been any drawers at the counting tables in my office. The money was, in fact, not even received at all from the emigrants at my office, but it seems that each family had handed their money to the lodging house keeper where they stayed and had received from him a "bon" for the amount (an I. O. U.), and these "bons" I took in payment and received the respective amounts later on from the landlord. They all were, as aforesaid, forwarded at reduced rates to New York, and several families who had too little money, and whom it was impossible to take for the money they had, were assisted by one charitable woman of their own party of the name of Sofia Vicenty, who paid several hundred reichsmarks out of her own pocket for such aids. I merely add the sums paid to me for each family on the other side, and have no doubt this will convince all interested that there is not a particle of fault on my part.

After all, it is too evident that the passengers must have been induced by some party having an interest in discrediting the business of forwarding passengers via England to the States. Everybody knows that it is not the first time that efforts have been made to this effect, and always passengers of as little intelligence as these in question have been used as tools.

But I have taken steps already to secure the protection of the law against these proceedings, and hope that nobody will judge me before the matter is duly examined by the respective authorities.

I am, sir, your obedient servant,

GEORGE HIRSCHMANN.

THE COMMITTEE ON POST OFFICE.

Messrs. Poppleton, of Ohio; Pratt, of Iowa, and Bagby, of Illinois, the sub-committee of the House of Representatives on "Expenditures on Public Buildings and Grounds," met yesterday in the New York Post Office. Their mission is to ascertain whether $207,000 in excess of the appropriation for that edifice has been expended; also whether the extra work involving that expenditure was necessary to protect the work already done in the building; and, if so, if the charges were reasonable. In company with Assistant Postmaster Pearson and Superintendent Yeoman the committee examined the new Post Office building yesterday. This morning, at ten o'clock, the committee will open formally and receive testimony.

BUSINESS TROUBLES.

Charles H. Woodruff, manufacturer of upholstery articles, of Canal street, is reported to be in difficulties. Six months ago his firm stood well, but it now is obliged to call a meeting of its creditors. The liabilities will exceed $150,000, while the assets will probably turn out poorly.

The Greek-American Confectionery Company, of No. 33 Wooster street, failed yesterday, with moderate liabilities.

Nathan Eckstein, dealer in dry goods, of No. 327 Third avenue; F. W. Reimar, wholesale dealer in hosiery, of Leonard street, and Howell & Overton, dealers in salt fish, &c., of No. 77 Dey street, have made assignments for the benefit of their creditors.

The prevailing warm weather seems to have a depressing effect upon the coal merchants. No fewer than four coal merchants were reported as being in financial difficulties yesterday, as follows:—A. L. Raymond, of No. 71 Broadway, and A. W. Lobdell, of Fourth avenue, failed; Cordes & Brosse, of No. 45 Tompkins street, have notified their creditors that they cannot comply with their engagements, and Mr. Daly, of No. 40 Montgomery street, has been sold out by the Sheriff.

In the matter of Frank H. Stowell, bankrupt, manufacturer of gloves, at Port Jervis, a first dividend of eight per cent was declared by the assignee yesterday, at a meeting of the creditors held before Register Fitch, at No. 345 Broadway.

The first meeting of the creditors of David, Joseph & Julius Ledermann was held yesterday before Register Dayton, at No. 322 Broadway, when Mr. Max Morgenthau was elected assignee. The following is a list of Messrs. Ledermann's largest creditors:—Jacob Bookman, $8,082 33; Ph. Friedman, $8,500; Hermann Bocklowitz, $4,071; W. J. Ehrich, $9,116 97; James Goodman, $1,200; G. N. Herman, $4,503; Mrs. R. Ehrich, $7,561 65; Ehrich & Co., $2,043 68; Philip Hirsch, $1,000; S. Herman, $1,500; National Park Bank, $3,199 29; Beckhorn & Carpenter, $2,000; the P. Lorillard estate, $625; M. Jansen, $4,066 24; M. Ehrenreich, $2,481 57. Upward of $20,000 in debts were proven at the meeting yesterday.

WALL STREET, FRIDAY, June 23—6 P. M.

The market came to a full stop at noon to-day, like an engine on its centre or the end of a paragraph. For the two hours previous there had hardly been steam enough to keep the machine going—nothing wonderful, in view of the fact that the great speculating engine drivers and stokers were away holidaying for the summer. Although at the commencement there was the faintest suspicion of a better feeling (suggested perhaps by the recovery of New Jersey Central to 75¼), the state of affairs, like the pre-Adamite world, was entirely "without form, and void" of any notable characteristics. There were the usual "Judge and Jury" on Lake Shore, but the former had no opinions to give that were worth an eighth and the latter no money to back them up with had they believed in them.

There were half per cent fluctuations in Western Union, Lake Shore and the Western stocks, while Pacific Mail was simply an embodied yawn, with no transactions to speak of. Towards one o'clock there arose an inclination to stiffen up prices, and they improved a fraction, particularly Lake Shore, which sold up to 55; and Western Union, which touched 67⅜. A sale of 1,500 shares of Lake Shore at 55, however, proved too much for the equanimity of the market, and the whole rise was lost in the next ten minutes. Later on the Broad street party put in an appearance in the Northwestern shares and bid the common up to 43¼ and the preferred to 66⅞, which had the effect of bettering the tone of the whole market, as well as of adding to the list of transactions, which at one time threatened a beggarly exhibit of sales.

The feeling in the Western shares has been strongly to the bull side, and apparently with some reason, though the free distribution of "points" is not always the most reliable mode of conveying information.

New Jersey Central also put on a more cheerful look, Mark Tapley like, under its difficulties, and closed at 75⅜, having touched 75½, though disbelievers in the concern, who are at the same time believers in Mr. Barrett, the accountant's, circular, were willing to put out options at sixty days' time at 2 per cent under the cash price.

To sum up, closing prices were a little stiffer and dealings a little larger, but the whole matter is confined to the small fry of the Board, while the big fish are swimming in more pleasant waters.

THE SALES TO-DAY.

Transactions in stocks were smaller than usual, aggregating only 70,200 shares. The principal dealings were in Lake Shore, Western Union and Northwestern.

MINING INTELLIGENCE.

The upward turn in the Bonanza shares seems to confirm the information repeatedly given in this column within a few days that the late depression in prices was due to extraneous causes rather than to any change in the actual condition or prospects of either the Consolidated Virginia or the California Company. The lesser stocks have moved somewhat in sympathy with these and have been affected by similar causes. The following are the closing prices in San Francisco to-day:—

ERIE IN LONDON.

Telegrams from London state that there was a largely attended meeting of Erie bond and stock holders there to-day. Mr. Watkin said the line was suffering from increased expenses and diminution of traffic. The receiver had got rid of many bad bargains, and the result was a substantial increase in net receipts. He believed Mr. Jewett was desirous of making the best of the line, and if shareholders and bondholders united a good property could be made of the company. He advised concessions. There were delays in law, but the committee was determined to pursue delinquents as New York courts ordered.

The meeting agreed to a resolution that the amended scheme be approved, and a committee empowered to take steps for carrying the same into effect. A vote of confidence in Mr. Jewett was adopted unanimously.

MEMORANDUM.

Mr. James Stuart having resigned the Presidency of the Hanover National Bank, of this city, Mr. James T. Woodward was, at a meeting of the Board of Directors held yesterday, the 22d, elected to fill this office.

Mr. Woodward was a member of the late firm of Ross, Campbell & Co., and is well known in business circles in this city.

FRIDAY, June 23—6 P. M.

Trade matters, while constantly varying from day to day during the past week, are not radically different at the present writing from what they were a week ago. The markets have been irregular and prices have fluctuated continually all through the week, generally showing a shrinkage, although occasionally an advance has been established. The tendency has been unmistakably toward a lower basis, however, so that the conclusion is irresistible that henceforth the business of the country will gravitate toward a specie basis, which needs only a little encouragement on the part of Congress in the way of a wise enactment in order to result practically in that much desired consummation. The substitution of silver for paper money, though decried as of no importance, has nevertheless worked a powerful influence on the financial and commercial interests of the country and has greatly encouraged the hope that the return to a sound system of finance is not so remote as has appeared along back. The people are fully prepared for resumption and if only the politicians can be brought to a realizing sense of their duty in the premises business may ere long be transacted on a more substantial basis than it has been since the country was first flooded with irredeemable paper money. Meantime business continues dull and there is little beyond the general decline in commercial values on which to base a hope of more prosperous times in the future. Yet there is an unmistakable belief in the minds of the mercantile community that the coming fall season will witness a substantial revival of business, despite the drawback of a Presidential election and the inevitable strife thereby engendered, in which all classes become more or less involved, to the neglect of almost everything else. During the past week there has been no especial activity anywhere. In some few commodities a fair business has been done which in these dull times assumes nominal importance, but which, when compared with more prosperous seasons, becomes absolutely insignificant. Dry goods have ruled dull, the low prices realized by public and private sale exerting no influence whatever in inducing purchases. Breadstuffs have been neglected, and prices have declined materially without inducing any increased outflow. Shippers' limits have been reduced from day to day or orders countermanded, so that the decline in prices has been inevitable. These remarks apply especially to wheat, although flour has likewise ruled dull and in buyers' favor all through the week. Corn has been in moderate request, and prices have declined somewhat, although strictly prime samples have been scarce and better sustained than other kinds. Oats have been dull and heavy. Whiskey has ruled exceedingly quiet, but firmer, and the lighter the demand the firmer the market. Provisions have fluctuated materially, the "ups" and "downs" being about equivalent. On 'Change to-day (Friday) business was moderate. Flour was dull, lower and irregular. Wheat was quiet, but firmer. Corn was stronger. Oats dull. Whiskey dull, but firmer. Pork dull and nominal. ST. LOUIS.

An Interview With Montgomery Blair on Presidential Prospects.

"TILDEN THE MAN FOR THE HOUR."

"Governor Hayes Will Be Used by Party Managers."

THE REFORM RECORD OF GOVERNOR TILDEN

A Review of the Chances of Thurman, Bayard and Hancock.

WHAT THE SOUTHERN DELEGATES SAY

A Strong Opposition Set In to a Military Man.

THE ANTI-TILDEN MEN AT WORK.

St. Louis, Mo., June 23, 1876.

Mr. Montgomery Blair, who has been in active political life for the past forty years, and whose experience and sagacity entitled his views to consideration, entered into conversation with the correspondent of the Herald to day, and the views he expressed will be found of the more interest since they assimilate with those of other prominent men now in St. Louis. Mr. Blair looks well, wiry and vigorous as ever, with his eye as full of fire as when he took part in the exciting scenes of the Convention of 1848.

Correspondent—You have attended many national conventions, I believe, Mr. Blair?

Mr. Blair—Yes, I have been a delegate in six national conventions—those of 1844, 1848, 1852 and 1860, at the Lincoln Convention in 1868 and 1872—that is to say, one republican and five democratic. I was not a delegate in 1856 or 1864.

Correspondent—You have seen some political contests in such bodies.

Mr. Blair—Well, yes; in all the conventions I have attended except one there have been hard fights over the nomination, but in nearly all, the choice having been made, harmony was restored. The Greeley Convention in Baltimore was the only entirely harmonious Convention I was ever in.

Correspondent—Who do you regard as the strongest candidate before the Convention up to this time?

Mr. Blair—Oh, Mr. Tilden, certainly. Everybody admits that he is the strongest candidate yet named, even though some desire his defeat; more outside the Convention than inside, however, I believe. I have not canvassed the vote, but I understand that Sherwood men who have been figuring take a large majority of the delegates for him already.

Correspondent—Do you regard him as the strongest candidate who could be placed before the country?

Mr. Blair—I do decidedly; Governor Tilden is the strongest man before the country, because he eliminates from the canvass all issues, save that of reform. He makes it the paramount issue; his opponent is strong on all other issues. Hayes is a hard money man, a war man and is sound on the school question. The only point good against him is that he represents a party under whose domination all the existing abuses arose. The existence of these abuses is acknowledged in the platform of his party. The republicans have therefore confessed judgment on the reform question, and if the plaintiff comes in and asks for judgment the court must give it. The radical platform admits that these gross abuses of which the country complain have grown up in the government, and they propose to correct them; but then they do not propose to turn out the party and the men who have been in power while the abuses have been created.

Correspondent—Do you know Governor Hayes personally?

Mr. Blair—Yes, I know him well.

Correspondent—Do you regard him as the man to correct these abuses?

Mr. Blair—No, he was in Congress while they existed, and he never made any attempt to correct them. He was in the army, but he never made any distinguishing mark there. He is a well rounded, pleasant, nice gentleman, who will be entirely in the hands of his party. In nominating him and declining to nominate the efficient and prominent men of the party, they have acknowledged that their leaders are not worthy of the confidence of the country, but they suppose they can get the confidence of the people by nominating one who is not known as a leader, but who will, nevertheless, be in the leaders' hands, and not in the hands of the reformers. They have not put forth a man of decisive character and vigor, who will insist on having his own way. Their candidate has been in former years Governor of Ohio, and has been in Congress, but he has never shown a desire to clear out the Augean stables, which wanted cleaning then as much as now. He made no sign. Now, if the democratic party are going to put up a man who has been passive on the subject of reform, as Governor Hayes has been, the argument will be just as strong that the democrats do not want reform, as it has been on the other side.

Correspondent—You think, then, the question of reform depends wholly on the candidate?

Mr. Blair—Not altogether; the two parties have different principles. The radical party is in itself, as shown by its platform, a great consolidation or centralization party. It advocates the concentration of power in the central government and, as a necessity, this concentration of power is followed by large expenditures of money by the government, and corruption must ensue as naturally as a stone cast into the air returns to earth by law of gravitation. The democratic party, on the other hand, is known to maintain what are called States rights views. This means simply a distribution of certain powers among the States and more simple and economical government at Washington. Centralization is the synonym of corruption. This is the reason, in fact, why Bristow was defeated at Cincinnati. I told Mr. Bristow six months ago that, for reasons I have now given, it was impossible that he could be nominated. The republicans with the centralization principles could not go for a man who would purge and simplify the government and bring it down to democratic principles. I told him that he had mistaken his party and should be a democrat. What took place at Cincinnati was only the verification of what I said to the Secretary, or rather to the Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, six months ago.

Correspondent—You think the republicans made a mistake in refusing to nominate Bristow?

Mr. Blair—I do, but it was one which, from the constitution of the party, was natural. If the democratic party should imitate the radicals in defeating the nomination of a man who has signalized himself as an earnest reformer by his own acts there would be as good grounds for accusing us of insincerity in our reform professions as there are for making such an accusation against our opponents. In such an unfortunate event the whole character of the contest would be changed.

Correspondent—What do you think of the opposition to Mr. Tilden?

Mr. Blair—Well, a man who enters with earnestness upon the work of a reformer as Mr. Bristow and Governor Tilden have done is obliged to make enemies in his own party. Unfortunately, although the democrats are, I think, in dead earnest in their sympathy with reform, there are rings and individuals in that party which are not any more honest than they ought to be, and they have friends high in position and of irreproachable personal character, perhaps, who feel aggrieved that those whom they like should be crushed down by the iron hand of reform. This is the reason, I think, why we have a large delegation here opposed to Mr. Tilden, composed of some very estimable gentlemen.

Correspondent—What do you think of the Tammany opposition to Governor Tilden?

Mr. Blair—Well, I class that entirely with this ring opposition of which I have spoken. Although John Kelly is, personally, as honest a man as ever lived, still in setting upon Tilden and combining with men who have enmities against Tilden he is in danger of being confounded, by men who do not understand the refinement of politics in New York, with the mere Ring opponents of the Governor. The truth is that the defect of Kelly's mind is its want of breadth. He ought to be able to see when the democrats of the State of New York, in Convention assembled, resolve unanimously in favor of Governor Tilden, and rest his claim for the nomination with their associates in the Union on his great service to the party in reforming the public administration, that no personal objections or personal preferences for other gentlemen ought to be allowed to interfere with the carrying out of the wishes of his State in the National Convention. Mr. Kelly ought to have made known his opposition in the State Convention, and to have fought the battle out there. He does himself great wrong and disappoints his friends, of whom I am one, and I claim to be a warm one, in keeping silence at that time when he had his day in Court, and coming here now to defeat the will of the great party that has honored him so often.

Correspondent—Do you believe that Tilden would be a resolute reformer—that he has the nerve and independence that are called for?

Mr. Blair—Certainly; Mr. Tilden belongs to a school of politicians in whom the idea of a severe close scrutiny of every dollar of expenditure of public money is inherent. It is the school of Silas Wright. They regard public money as the sacred trust. Mr. Tilden has lived up to that idea all his life. His most cherished associations have been with men to whom this idea has been a religion, and he has illustrated it on all occasions. No man ever gave a more signal proof of his devotion to that idea than Governor Tilden did when he abandoned his professional business, which was more lucrative than that of any other lawyer in New York, shutting his office door to pursue and break down the Tweed Ring in that city—a labor so exhausting that when he had finished it he had to retire to Europe for, I think, twelve months to rest and recruit himself. This herculean labor he undertook when all the responsible people in power in the city were absolutely upholding Tweed. The World, the organ of the democratic party, was contending day by day in support of the Ring. That was under Mr. Hurlbert's management, who was then the acting live editor, Mr. Marble being sick and unable to see to the management of his paper. Mr. Tilden's enterprise looked, therefore, like a forlorn hope. I know that I talked with Governor Hoffman, at Newport, at that time, and he told me that O'Brien and the rest who were fighting Tweed were just as corrupt as Tweed, and that it would only be putting a hungry set in the place of a full set to make any change. Governor Tilden did not entertain these ideas; he was willing to co-operate with anybody to break down organized corruption in the city of New York. I believe that Mr. Tilden would carry these same views into the Presidency. The idea that the people of New York are not going to support a man who thus exerts himself in the overthrow of plunderers is to suppose that they love to be plundered, which is a new feature in the American people which I have not yet discovered; then everybody knows that Washington, where all the great revenues of the federal government are held, needs at this time the same vigorous hand and the same organizing mind to systematize and carry out reform. Hence the whole people, not merely New York, but the whole country, North, South, East and West, are ready to take up Tilden. His election will be no party question. The great mass of the people on both sides want the honest work that every man in this country knows Governor Tilden will do. The people know also that it will take four years of the hardest sort of work that he is capable of doing to purge the Federal government of the great abuses with which it is thoroughly penetrated. I believe, honestly, that if we insist on putting Tilden into the field and go before the country and appeal to the people as patriots to join with us in this great work for the perpetuance of this great inheritance our fathers have given us in this Centennial year, we can sweep the whole Union as it has never been carried before. Reform is the question of questions. As I have said the radical platform shows that their own party knows it to be the question absorbing the public mind, and we have in this man Tilden and his record a guarantee of earnestness in carrying out this great work. If we place Tilden at the head of our party we give indubitable proof that we are alone fitted to do this work which everybody requires to be done now and to be done thoroughly.

Correspondent—As to other issues than reform, Mr. Blair?

Mr. Blair—There are no other issues that can be regarded as comparable in importance with this one.

Correspondent—Yet there are other issues more or less important?

Mr. Blair—Yes. The republicans will shake the bloody shirt, they will agitate the school question and say a great deal about inflation; but in all this their object is to divert public attention from the sovereign issue, which is reform; but they will not divert the public attention. The people will see their purpose and will laugh at them and beat them. Unquestionably there is no doubt that the democracy, if they conduct the canvass properly, have the game in their own hands.

Correspondent—But as to other candidates than Mr. Tilden?

Mr. Blair—There are other candidates, very respectable gentlemen, to whom there is no objection—honest and capable men, and if there were only the democrats to consider, if that party was certain of a majority, it would not make much difference which of them was taken.

Correspondent—Suppose Mr. Hendricks were nominated?

Mr. Blair—It is not known to the country at large that Mr. Hendricks ever distinguished himself while Governor of his State as a severe and unrelenting reformer, but it is understood that he at one time favored the payment of the public debt in greenbacks. He would not, therefore, give his party the legitimate advantage of his position on the reform issue, and he would enable the enemy to make an important battle on the currency question. He would not gain any republican votes, on account of reform, and he would imperil a large vote among Germans and other sound democrats, who hold the money issue to be a very important one.

Correspondent—Suppose Mr. Thurman were nominated?

Mr. Blair—Mr. Thurman would be objected to, because he made anti-war speeches in 1861. He would expose us, therefore, to a reopening of the war question, and he would not be considered very safe on finance, because though his personal views on that subject are very sound, he did not go forward in Ohio to make any contest in the Convention there against the platform, when he might have defeated it. He had an ill-timed modesty on that subject.

Correspondent—You are aware that General Hancock is regarded with much favor in some quarters?

Mr. Blair—General Hancock is a very gallant soldier, but objection will be made to him. Tilden is the man who must lead our forces if we are to expect victory.

AN ACTIVE DAY.

It has been an active day in the parlors and lobbies of the St. Louis hotels for a period so many days in advance of that appointed for the Convention. The number of persons present is very large. Many entire delegations are already here, and there are apparently some representatives from every State. The Southern Hotel, one of the finest and roomiest houses in the country, with nearly a square mile of marble halls and corridors, swarms with visitors; so do the Lindell, the Laclede, Barnum's and many minor houses. Active interchange of views between arriving statesmen and those who have been here already for a few days fills up the time in the operation. The endeavor is to find out on the part of one force the lines and precise position of some other force, and one may consequently hear on both sides more expression of opinion than it is safe to believe; but with all allowance made for what is not to be believed at all and what is to be taken with a grain of salt, the general drift of opinion can be seen from hour to hour and more nakedly the distinct phases it presents from day to day. As the result of to-day's observations it may be said in general terms that in so far as there is any change it is in favor of Tilden. Every element of political force felt here up to this moment may be classed as Tilden vs. anti-Tilden; for elements of opposition to Tilden have not yet reached any development, except in opposition to a military man. We have had a lesson, they say, in General Grant, who is also a very good soldier, and who has not been his whole life in the army, as Hancock has, who has not learned enough of civil affairs and of civil men to be capable of making a reform administration. Moreover, General Hancock's views on the great questions which now engross the public mind, the financial question in particular, are undeveloped. This is not encouraging to the people to accept a military candidate.

VIEWS OF DELEGATES.

Colonel Albert Preston Johnston, of Virginia, son of General Albert Sidney Johnston, who was an officer on Jeff Davis' staff, believes that the Virginia delegation, or a majority of them, will favor Governor Tilden's nomination. They have had no consultation, however, and are entirely uninstructed. The desire of the State is that the strongest man shall receive the nomination, for victory is everything to their section and candidates are nothing. General Hancock has many friends in Virginia, and is generally admired for his soldierly qualities and statesmanlike views. Virginia believes reform should be the issue on which to fight the campaign, and has regarded Tilden as a very proper leader in such a contest.

GENERAL CHALMERS,

of Mississippi, is in advance of the delegates from his State, and believes that with them Governor Tilden will be the choice of a majority. The delegation is instructed to vote as a unit and against the two-thirds rule if the two-thirds rule be reported by the committee. The delegation, in accordance with the instructions of the State, would move to amend by substituting the majority rule. Other candidates have their friends in the delegation, but General Chalmers thinks the majority will decidedly be for Tilden.

COLONEL LONGBOROUGH,

of Arkansas, is uncertain as to who the delegates from his State will favor; they desire to find out who is the strongest man, and will give him their support; they will vote as a unit in the Convention, and he believes will favor Tilden, provided he is considered an available candidate. The South, he says, wants the democratic party to win, and cares nothing about personal preferences as to the candidate.

DEWITT C. LITTLEJOHN.

Ex-Speaker Dewitt C. Littlejohn is open in his expressions of hostility to Tilden's nomination, but he says that he has nothing against the Governor personally, and only opposes him because he is certain he cannot carry New York. Governor Tilden was elected in 1874, he says, by the votes of republicans who desired to defeat John A. Dix, in Conkling's interest, and last year his majority was dwindled away to a mere nothing; although all he did for reform was done in the first year of his term of office. He does not believe in the Governor's sincerity as a reformer, and is so decisively against him that, in the event of his nomination, Mr. Littlejohn seems likely to return to the republican camp. He is earnest and sincere in his political sentiments, and cannot pretend to accept a candidate who he regards as unfit for the nomination.

Mr. Erastus Corning and John V. L. Pruyn, of Albany, are now here, and have to work in earnest to persuade outside delegates that Tilden, if nominated, cannot carry New York. Of course, these gentlemen are regarded as very different to the blatant Tammany crowd and their opposition might damage Mr. Tilden more than it is likely to do if it were not for the impression that their fight against the Governor is a purely personal one. Both Mr. Corning and Mr. Pruyn are gentlemen of influential position and ability, and as they care nothing about office or individuals, and are democrats on principle, it is believed they will support Mr. Tilden if he should be nominated.

THE TWO-THIRDS RULE.

The principal managers of Governor Tilden's cause are opposed to the doing away with the two-thirds rule. Mr. Richmond, the son of the great democratic leader, Dean Richmond; Lieutenant Governor Dorsheimer, Secretary of State Bigelow, Mr. Pelton and others, express a decided opinion in favor of adhering to the two-thirds rule. Should the matter come before the Convention, as it no doubt will, Mr. Dorsheimer will probably rise and declare, on behalf of Mr. Tilden's supporters, their desire to maintain the two-thirds system, stating that their candidate does not wish a nomination unless two-thirds of the party as represented in convention are willing to make him their leader in the coming fight.

TALKING TILDEN.

Mr. Smith M. Weed is here and talking for Tilden. The Buffalo delegates are on hand. Mr. A. P. Laning and Mr. Joseph Warren talk Tilden, but it is whispered that their service is only from the lip.

MR. BLAIR SERENADED.

A serenade was given this evening to Montgomery Blair, at the Lindell Hotel. Mr. Blair addressed the multitude to the effect that things had reached such a pass that a change was desirable at any cost. He was satisfied the great heart of the American people would respond to a nomination that promised the clearing out of the rogues who have so long held sway in the federal administration.

Mr. Blair was succeeded, after loud calls, by Lieutenant Governor Dorsheimer, of New York, who in a brief speech declared that Governor Tilden was the one pre-eminent man in the nation to rescue it from the toils of corruption into which it had fallen. His eulogies of Tilden were received with strong demonstrations of applause.

PENNSYLVANIA DELEGATES.

Pittsburg, June 23, 1876.

A large number of Pennsylvania delegates to St. Louis are in the city to-night, together with a host of democratic politicians, principally from the eastern part of the State. The party was enlarged to-night by the addition of country delegates from the southwestern districts, and to-morrow morning the heaviest part of the Pennsylvania delegation will leave this city for the Convention. It was first intended that the eastern and country delegates from this State should meet in this city on Saturday morning for a general interchange of views on both platform and candidates for nomination, but this has been abandoned, inasmuch as it would seem that the settled choice of the delegation is Hancock. Senator Wallace, at the Monongahela House, to-night, said he would not venture an opinion as to the choice of the Convention, but would say that indications point to a strong preference, and fast increasing one, in the Pennsylvania delegation, for Hancock. It was possible that the delegation would vote as a unit first and all the time for this gentleman.

WASHINGTON.

FROM OUR REGULAR CORRESPONDENT.

Washington, June 23, 1876.

THE CORRESPONDENCE IN THE WINSLOW EXTRADITION CASE—CURIOUS SUPPRESSIONS BY LORD DERBY IN HIS RETURN OF THE DESPATCHES TO PARLIAMENT.

The correspondence respecting extradition sent into Parliament on the 8th of June was received here yesterday. Comparison of a copy with a similar publication sent into Congress by the President, June 10, reveals some singular and awkward omissions in the papers laid be ore Parliament. Lord Derby entirely suppresses Secretary Fish's despatch of May 22, which, it appears from a published telegram of Mr. Hoffman to Mr. Fish, Lord Derby received on the 6th of June. He suppresses also a telegram from Sir Edward Thornton of the 27th of May, to whose contents he alludes, and a despatch from the same of the 1st of May, on which also he bases part of his argument. Finally, in a published despatch to Sir Edward Thornton, dated May 29, he replies to a remark of Mr. Fish concerning the peculiar wording of the English Extradition act, which is contained in Mr. Fish's despatch of May 22, delivered to Lord Derby only on June 6. The question arises, Is this despatch of Lord Derby antedated, and was it really written after he had read Mr. Fish's despatch on the 6th of June? Such a suspicion would be unwarrantable were it not for the suppression of three despatches in this Parliamentary return. If Lord Derby's despatch, dated May 29, was really sent on that day it ought to have been in Sir Edward Thornton's hands by the 10th of June at furthest. It would be interesting to know whether he received it at that time, or, if later, on what precise day, as notice of two inquiries on the extradition question was given in Parliament on Thursday. It is hoped that Lord Derby will be asked the question why he suppressed so many important despatches in his return, which was supposed to contain the whole correspondence, and how he came to answer Mr. Fish before he could know what the latter had said.

THE VENEZUELAN CLAIM COMMISSION JOBBERY—A BRILLIANT LIGHT THROWN ON A DARK SUBJECT—TESTIMONY OF EX-COMMISSIONER TALMADGE—A HEAVY BLOW AT EX-CONGRESSMAN ORTH.

The true history of the infamy attaching to the Venezuelan Claim Commission jobbery is likely be fully unfolded, now that the Foreign Affairs Committee has got at the witness, David M. Talmadge, the American member of the commission. He was heard to-day at some length, but not as fully as the committee wish, the members being anxious to get back upon the floor of the House to watch the progress of the Sundry Civil bill.

It will be remembered that Orth, the republican candidate for Governor in Indiana, claimed to have been employed by Talmadge when he got a bill passed to enforce the fraudulent claims of that Commission against the protest of the Venezuelan government. That government charged that Talmadge, the American Commissioner; Machado, the umpire; Stillwell, the American Minister, and Murray, brother-in-law of Stillwell, formed a ring by which the awards were fraudulently increased, the members of the ring retaining the largest share of the certificates. To-day Talmadge stated that while it was not true that he employed Orth and gave him $7,000 worth of the certificates he did pay Orth $250 for another purpose in April, 1870 This was when Orth was a member of the House, and the money was paid for Orth's intercession in his favor before the Foreign Affairs Committee, of which Orth himself was a member.

Machado, whom he got appointed umpire of the Commission, he admitted was his private business agent in Venezuela, and Talmadge admitted that while the Commission only awarded $400,000 Machado, as his umpire, increased it to $800,000. The evidence heretofore adduced shows that this increase was made so that the ring should be able to divide the certificates between them.

In relation to the charge that he (Talmadge) passed a large amount of certificates awarded by the Commission, Talmadge contradicted himself repeatedly, first denying that he had any, but finally admitting that he got them in various ways—all legitimate. His testimony also showed that Murray, who retained $250,000 of certificates out of Driggs' award for alleged professional services rendered before the Commissioners, never appeared before them. All Talmadge's evidence showed that when he was appointed Joint High Commissioner on the part of the United States to adjudicate international claims he was a gas manufacturer. Talmadge had never studied law and yet was to adjudicate international claims. His examination will be continued to-morrow.

To-day Seth Driggs entered suit by his attorney, J Parker Jordan, against Talmadge, to recover $150,000 damages alleged to have been sustained by the defendant refusing to deliver to him certificates amounting in one case to $5",000 and in another to $50,000, in payment of claims of the plaintiff adjudicated upon by the American and Venezuela Mixed Commission in 1866.

MR. DALY'S BENEFIT.

The Fifth Avenue Theatre was yesterday the scene of a popular demonstration in honor of its enterprising manager in his character as a dramatic author. It was what was felicitously enough called the author's festival, and the house during the two performances was crowded by the intelligence and fashion of the city. It is needless here to speak of the value of the two plays which were presented, "Divorce" and "Pique," both of which we owe to Mr. Daly's facile and graceful pen—that both pieces reached their two hundredth performance in a city where the theatre going public are exceedingly exacting, is a sufficient guarantee that they possessed sterling qualities which recommended them to that unbiassed judge—the public. Something however, is due to the bright galaxy of artists to whose talents, and we might even say genius, those works owe much of their success. Among so many clever artists it is almost invidious to make a selection for mention, for each one contributes something of his personality, to the completeness of the representations that have put the Fifth Avenue in the front place in our theatrical world. Miss Davenport is probably the best and most versatile actress the American stage has produced, while the names of Brougham, Davidge, Fisher, Hardenburgh and Harkins form a constellation of talent such as is seldom assembled on one stage. There was last night a hearty call for Mr. Daly and a demand that he should make a speech. In this dilemma he carried out Mr. John Brougham almost by main force and presented him to the audience as the "speech maker of the establishment." For once the genial John was taken somewhat aback, and amused the house by explaining his position as well as his grievance against Mr. Daly for having placed him in a false position. The audience, however, wished to hear Mr. Daly speak, and would not be satisfied until that gentleman came out and thanked them in three words.

"The Author's Festival" must be pronounced a great success, of which Mr. Daly may feel pardonably proud.

PRINCE OSCAR.

VISIT OF THE SON OF THE KING OF SWEDEN TO THE EXHIBITION, ACCOMPANIED BY MIDSHIPMEN FROM THE CORVETTE NORKOPSING.

Philadelphia, June 23, 1876.

Among the visitors to the Exhibition to-day was Prince Oscar Charles Auguste, Duke of Gothland and son of the King of Sweden, who was accompanied by a number of the midshipmen of the Swedish corvette Norkopsing, now in the Delaware. The visit of the Prince is understood to be informal, as his rank is simply that of a cadet and it is the expressed wish of the King that his son should be treated only as any other midshipman would be treated. Efforts will doubtless be made by the countrymen of the Prince and others to make the royal stay as agreeable as possible. The Norkopsing, before leaving American waters, is expected to visit Annapolis.

Ship Tobique, which was caught across the creek when being launched at Courtney Bay, NB, 22d inst, was floated at high water PM of same day, and has been towed to St John, NB.

Bark Bergliot (Nor), while being towed from Canton to the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Co's elevator at Locust Point, suddenly capsized, falling over on the tug, owing to being improperly ballasted. The tug succeeded in holding her up until lines had been attached to the elevator wharf and in 15 minutes the bark was brought on an even keel.

Bark H Pregnall, which sailed from Charleston 20th inst for Rotterdam, was formerly the Br bark M Wood, which got aground on Pumpkin Hill Shoals on the night of Oct 15, 1875, and was subsequently towed to Charleston, where she was sold to the Pregnall bros, by whom she was thoroughly repaired, and her name changed to the H Pregnall.

Schr Ella, Driscoll, from Porto Rico for New York, with a cargo of sugar and molasses, struck on Hereford Bar morning of 22d inst. There is but little prospect of saving either vessel or cargo. The vessel is consigned to I R Staples, cargo to Gossler & Co. Assistance has been despatched to the Ella by the Coast wrecking Co.

Schr Behring has been sold at San Francisco, and her name changed to that of John Bright.

Boston, June 23—A schooner which has arrived here reports having passed a boat bottom up to which three men were clinging. The sea was so high that they could not be reached. They are supposed to be of the crew of the schr Ida L Hammond, of Portland, for Boston, before reported missing.

Quebec, June 23—The number of arrivals from sea up to date is 135 vessels, 104,127 tons in excess of last year at this date. The transactions in chartering for the week have not been very numerous, as the falling off in arrivals has been very decided, and but few vessels are on the market; the advance in rates from other points of shipment has had the effect of stiffening the present market.

San Francisco, June 23—The British bark "Great Republic," which arrived to-day from Liverpool, reports that on the 28th of May, in lat 11 41 N, lon 113 21 W, boarded the British bark "Clavendom." She had been abandoned and was on fire, nothing being left but a mere iron shell and the remains of her still burning cargo. She appeared to have been coal laden. No signs of life were visible in the vicinity of the wreck.
